CITY TAX INCREASE POINTED BY KLINE BUDGET FIGURES

A budget calling for the expenditure of $25,206,223, submitted to Council today by Mayor Charles H. Kline, would, if adopted, mean an increase of 7 mills on land, it was announced by Council President John S. Herron.

Herron said an increase at this time cannot even be considered.

The Mayor's estimate for 1933, as compared with $25,305,108 for 1932, does not take into consideration the reduced revenues of the city for 1932, or the $2,000,000 deficit created this year.

An increase in taxes is being fought by a Citizens Committee headed by W. P. Witherow, who says he has the promise of Council there will be no increase.

The Mayor in his letter accompanying the budget proposals says that, based on 1932 tax collections, the city will face an increase of four mills on land and two mills on buildings. It was pointed out the Mayor made no provision for the $2,000,000 deficit, anticipated

DERELICT DECLARED LOST CHARLEY ROSS

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The Charley Ross case, a kidnaping mystery for 58 years, was revived today in the death from hunger of a derelict of the city streets.

Perhaps, like countless others before it, the new clue to the solution of one of the most baffling crimes of American history may lead nowhere. Scores of persons in the years since 4-year-old Charley Ross was abducted from in front of his Germantown (Pa.) home have claimed to know his whereabouts, but all have failed in proof.

Mrs. Emma Kleinhertz, of Catskill, N. Y., believes she has evidence that the Bowery derelict, William Bromson, of whose death from malnutrition she read recently in a New York newspaper, was really Charley Ross. Detectives were in Catskill today questioning her.

Officers at the Missing Persons Bureau were skeptical when they received a letter from Mrs. Kleinhertz identifying Bromson as Ross. She said she and Ross had been friends all their lives. He was a small boy when she met him, and he told her he was the Ross boy. She said he gave her papers in substantiation of what he said, and made her promise she would not disclose their contents until he died. These papers, still in her possession, were to be shown to detectives today.

Charley Ross was 4 years old when he was kidnaped 58 years ago. Bromson's age on the death

W. R. Hearst States Debt Views at Request Of British Newspaper

Universal Service Special Cable.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Reynolds Illustrated News, a weekly publication, yesterday published a cablegram from William Randolph Hearst, sent in response to a message requesting Mr. Hearst's "frank opinion of the present debt position between America and Great Britain."

Following is the newspaper's introductory note and the text of Mr. Hearst's cablegram:

"From WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, whose 25 newspapers, circulated by many millions throughout the length and breadth of the United States, are by far the greatest single factor in influencing American public opinion."

SAN SIMEON, Cal., Nov. 26.

I AM AS FRIENDLY to England as a man can be to a country which is not his own native land, but the fact is that England borrowed the money from America with the definite intent and the positive promise to repay. Moreover, America loaned the money to England in the time of England's greatest need. There is, therefore, not only the ordinary business necessity of paying an honest debt, but there is also the ordinary, decent obligation of appreciating and repaying a friend in need.

It is inconceivable to me that a great commercial nation, like England, would evade the payment of an honest debt; and it is equally inconceivable that England would jeopardize the Anglo-American friendship which has recently developed, by such an exhibition of crass ingratitude for so great a service rendered by a friend.

The statement that England needs the money is not relevant. America also needs the money; and, if comparisons were to be made, it would be found that America needs the money more than England does.

America has more war debt, more deficit, more unemployed—in fact, more depression.

England has the resources to pay and should pay, not only in honor, but in wisdom and foresight.

I THINK England has made a great mistake, in the present conversations with America, in associating herself with the other nations of Europe, which are demanding debt repudiation.

Take France, for instance: France has been forgiven all the money that she borrowed from America during the war and for war purposes. She is being asked to repay only the money that she borrowed since the war; yet, France is endeavoring to evade even that repayment.

Why should England associate herself with an habitual repudiationist of this character?

Italy has been forgiven two-thirds of her debt, and now complains about having to pay one-third. Yet, Italy is quite capable of paying, while France, as we all know, is better able to pay than any nation in the world.

Why should England associate itself with these two nations, which come into court without any

STATE SENATE LINKED IN PEDDLING OF COLLEGE GIFTS

Reputed traffickking in scholarships of four state-aided schools was under fire on a broad front today.

For years State Senators have each received three scholarships a year for each of four schools—Pitt, Penn, Penn State and Temple. Trading these has been the common practice between Senators of the western and the eastern ends of the state.

In addition to trading, which was considered proper, reports are to the effect that some of the Senators handed over the coveted credentials providing free tuition to their political lieutenants, who sold them at cut rates.

One arrest, that of Henry S. Fitch, has been made in Philadelphia, according to news dispatches from that city. He has been held for the grand jury, charged with passing bad checks on Pennsylvania and Temple universities, in connection with alleged sale of scholarships.

Authorities of the two Philadelphia schools began an investigation following the statement by a student that he had paid for a scholarship supposed to have been granted free.

Gov. Pinchot is said to have become interested in the inquiry.

State Senator William D. Mansfield, also a county commissioner, declared that unless the charges were cleared up, he would sponsor a legislative investigation.

At the same time Chancellor John G. Bowman, of the University of Pittsburgh, and John Weber, business manager, were on their way to Harrisburg, supposedly to confer with Gov. Pinchot on developments in the probe, first started in Philadelphia.

State-aided schools in addition to Pitt are the University of Pennsylvania, Pennsylvania State College and Temple University.

Each scholarship is for four years. Those for Pitt are valued at $300 a year or $1,200 for the entire course. Those at the University of Pennsylvania were slightly lower.

Senator Mansfield said:

"I believe there is something back of these reports. Unless

PARK SHUNS CRUSADE TO UPHOLD BLUE LAW

Future cases involving the Blue Law will be left to local authorities, except in instances where church services are interfered with, District Attorney Andrew T. Park announced today.

Park's stand followed action by the county detectives yesterday in closing a benefit show in Sharpsburg after a complaint by the Rev. Dr. R. M. Blackwood, general secretary of the Sabbath Association of Western Pennsylvania. No attempt would be made to prosecute the case, Park indicated.

Park said:

"The business of my office is so large that we have neither the time nor the force to interfere in summary conviction cases, including the Blue Law. A similar situation would be for us to step in and arrest someone for going through a traffic stop light.

"Our policy will be to leave all such cases to the cities and boroughs except where something is done to interfere with a church service. In such event we will act."

The Sharpsburg show billed by the Junior Lodge O. S. I. at the New Main Theater was closed, detectives said, without consulting Prosecutor Park. No tickets had been sold, but a collection was to have been taken, detectives said.

Detectives also investigated a complaint by Mrs. Frank Anoskey, of Carnegie, against a concert last night by the choir of St. Mary's Russian Orthodox Church in Carnegie Theater. Tickets had been sold previously but none at the door. The concert was allowed to proceed.

Rain in California.
The Governor Flies In.
Good News of Henry Ford.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HEARST RANCH,
San Simeon, Cal., Nov. 28.

WHEN RAIN prepares to fall, in California, it is a long drawn out preparation, like that of a woman, in comedy, preparing to weep, for a fur coat.

The getting-ready-to-rain process began on this mountain range Saturday. Fog came sweeping in from the ocean, the thermometer dropped, and the wind blew. The oldest gardener had said:

Fog did gather on that mountain, all around it, and apparently, miles above it, but no rain. All night the preparations continued, more wind, more fog, but in the morning no rain. Nature tried again, with low clouds, floating only six hundred feet above the ocean.

Then the rain came, the Californians bless it, for it is needed. The native-born apologize for it, saying it is "unusual."

WITH THE rain pouring, fog fighting for its life, clouds lowering, and wind blowing, Gov. Rolph came flying from Los Angeles in W. R. Hearst's plane. The trip was all right, he said. The pilot came over the ocean, part way, then "dodged" inland, over the mountains, came down from a height of 8,000 feet behind the mountains, over the Hearst ranch, swooped down under the low clouds and landed.

The motto of California's cheerful Governor is:

"When you can fly, never travel any other way."

After discussing various conditions with Mr. Hearst, Gov. Rolph flew off again, in a fog that had grown blacker. He had an engagement for today, helping Santa Monica clubwomen to celebrate the birthday of a lady ninety-four years old.

EFFECTIVE PROTEST against social injustice and cruelty has been made in printed books. Everyone remembers Charles Dickens' powerful attacks on schools cruelly managed, and the infamous debtors' prison, Victor Hugo's L'Homme Qui Rit, and Zola's more recent writings on the Dreyfuss case.

The moving picture, more powerfully and effectively than any other agency, will work against brutality, by actually enabling millions to SEE IT, in-

Grid Victory Celebrators Jailed

Two McKeesport High School boys were arrested as hundreds of students swarmed the McKeesport business district this afternoon in celebration of the high school's football victory over Clairton High Saturday.

McKeesport High became co-champion of this district by the victory, and the students were dismissed from classes to celebrate. They did—to the extent that all available policemen were needed to keep them from "crashing" theater doors. The police department was swamped with emergency calls as approximately 1,800 students sought to enter the theaters without tickets.

Fred Swanson and Thomas Tassone, both 16, were arrested on disorderly conduct charges. Police said they broke open a rear door of a theater.

HENRY FORD RALLIES WITH CRISIS NEAR

DETROIT, Nov. 28. — (AP.) — Henry Ford was reported making "normal progress" today in his recovery from an operation performed Saturday for relief from strangulated femoral hernia and removal of his appendix.

A bulletin issued at 11 a. m. said:

"Mr. Ford's physicians report he passed a favorable night. His temperature was 99, pulse 82, respiration 18. Normal progress of the case is expected."

Physicians not connected with the case said that the bulletin indicated Ford's physicians were satisfied that the vitality of the 69-year-old industrialist will carry him safely through the "crisis" which usually follows about 48 hours after such operations, and in which infection constitutes the greatest danger.

SLAYER EXECUTED IN 'GAS CHAMBER'

By CAROL CROSS
International News Service.

CARSON CITY, Nev., Nov. 28.—A whiff of hydrocyanic gas that savored of almond blossoms today legally took the life of John Hall, 57, alias Everett Mull, former Morganton, N. C., contractor.

Hall was executed in Nevada's lethal gas chamber at the state prison here at 6:28 a. m. for the murder of his bootlegging partner, John T. "Hardrock" O'Brien, at Las Vegas, Nev., June 15, 1931, in a quarrel over Mrs. Hall's affections and $686 whisky profits.

After eating a hearty breakfast, Hall walked steadily and smiling to the execution chamber as dawn broke over the Nevada desert.

Quickly the guards strapped him to the wooden chair and walked outside to join other witnesses, who peered through a small glass window.

The lethal gas was turned into the airtight death room.

One whiff—and Hall slumped over in his chair. Physicians said that death was almost instantaneous.

Hall disappeared mysteriously from Morganton, where he was a member of a respected family, four years ago following the death of his first wife.

The 41 witnesses to the execution included Wardens James Holohan, of San Quentin, and Court Smith, of Folsom prison, in California.

OHIO REFORMATORY PRISONERS REBEL

CHILLICOTHE, O., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The United States reformatory here was the scene of a disorder today when prisoners, said to have been dissatisfied with a meal, broke dishes and windows, and then refused to go to work. No one was injured and order had been restored this afternoon.

The disorder occurred in the mess hall, where some 75 prisoners threw plates, cups and saucers about, several of the missiles shattering windows. All available guards were called out and order was restored in a short time.

DOLL AIDS RECOVERY OF GIRL IN HOSPITAL

This little girl's name is "Dot." For several days she had been under the care of doctors and nurses at the Children's Hospital. With the idea of getting "Dot" a doll for Christmas her mother had gone to her neighbors and secured the required three six-month subscriptions for the Sun-Telegraph.

In the meantime, little "Dot," seriously ill, had been taken to the Children's Hospital. The doctors said: "Keep her as cheerful as possible—she's a very sick child."

The mother quickly thought of the Sun-Telegraph Doll Lady and an appeal was made to hasten the verification of the subscriptions so that the sick child could get her dolly immediately. She wanted "Precious."

No time was lost in the Sun-Telegraph office. Dot had Precious a few hours after the situation was explained to the Doll Lady. Dot's mother and her aunt took Precious to the hospital on Thanksgiving Day. Dot's eyes glistened as her tired little arms clasped the big doll. Improvement was immediately noticed in her condition. This improvement has continued day by day, and the doctors expect Dot to go home with her big Precious dolly within a very few days.

The attending physicians and nurses said, "Sunshine and cheer often amplify the use of medicine. This is a case that proves it."

Anyway, little Dot is on the road to recovery, and her mother says that Precious had more to do with this change for the better—more than anything else with the exception of, perhaps, a mother's prayers.

MACDONALD SPEEDS NEW WAR DEBT NOTE

Associated Press.

England, which owes the United States $95,550,000 on December 15, is at work on a second note renewing a request for postponement of that payment and for reconsideration of the entire debts problam. After the cabinet approves the text it will be sent immediately to Washington.

France, with an installment of $20,000,000 due on the same date, is considering a similar note suggesting postponement of the December payment and prolongation of the Hoover moratorium. It probably will be sent soon after England's memorandum.

Poland, which owes $3,303,000 next month, already has sent a second note to Washington with a full explanation of its request for suspension of the December payment.

Italy is ready to pay the $1,245,000 she owes, but, although the government has made no official pronouncement, the general sentiment there is that postponement should be granted.

No new decisions were reached today at a conference on debts between President Hoover and his two closest advisers, Secretaries Stimson and Mills.

NON-FIXABLE TAGS GIVEN OUT BY KERR

City Controller James P. Kerr today turned over the first of the 100,000 new non-fixable traffic tags to Safety Director James M. Clark. The remainder will not be given Clark until Wednesday morning.

Thursday morning all police will be supplied with them. Paul Hunt, of the controller's office, will discuss new tags before the Traffic Division Thursday morning.

The tags are both blue and white. The blue set is given an offender if he is in the car, and the white ones attached to cars without an occupant.

Both tags are in triplicate. Copies are sent to the offender, Traffic Court and the Controller. The Controller will make an audit and demand an explanation for every missing tag.

HOUSE COMMITTEE STARTS MACHINERY FOR REPEAL BILL

GROUP CALLED FOR SESSION FRIDAY

Meeting Will Be Held Before Congress Convenes

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—No time is to be lost in starting the machinery for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment in the short session of Congress.

A special meeting of the Judiciary Committee of the House was called today for Friday, December 2, three days in advance of the convening of Congress, to consider a repeal resolution which already has been drafted by Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas.

Sumners called the meeting after a conference with Speaker John N. Garner. He said he saw no reason why the committee should not be ready to report a repeal resolution on the opening day, as hearings are considered unnecessary.

The repeal resolution, as framed by Democratic leaders, was made public by Sumners. It reads:

"Section 1—The eighteenth article of amendment is hereby repealed.

"Section 2—The article will be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by conventions in three-fourths of the several states within seven years from the date of its submission to the states by the Congress."

Dry Organizations To Meet at Capital

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—A meeting of representatives of the principal organizations opposing any change in prohibition will be held here Wednesday to map a unified fight against modification or repeal.

One informal session of some leaders was held here recently. It included the Anti-Saloon League, the Association of Catholics Favoring Prohibition, the W. C. T. U., the Methodist Board of Temperance and Public Morals and the International Reform Federation.

The attitude taken toward a beer bill was that should Congress pass such legislation to permit a return of legalized beer, a reaction against it within two years would cause Congress to reverse its own action.

Leaders of dry organizations believe their best strategy is to rely on state legislatures to block any upset over prohibition.

SCHOLARSHIP SALES CHARGED

these charges are cleared up satisfactorily before the Legislature convenes in January, I shall back a legislative investigation. To what extent the sale of scholarships has been going on I do not know.

"There is nothing objectionable in trading scholarships. I have done that myself. I traded University of Pennsylvania scholarships simply because my constituents didn't want to go to college in Philadelphia and his didn't want to come to Pittsburgh."

Mansfield stated that under the law these scholarships were to be given out to deserving students on the basis of need and scholastic standing.

State Senator Samuel W. Salus was quoted as saying he believed two senators were directly involved in sale of scholarship, but that some may have turned them over to political supporters, who in turn had sold them to the highest bidders.

Senator Salus said he hoped arrangements could be made with the schools to make the scholarships good for one year instead of four years, with the understanding that the scholarship may be renewed each year if the student makes good.

Attorney Joseph M. Gavvam, Jr., of Philadelphia, was quoted as saying that trading scholarships between Allegheny County and Philadelphia senators resulted in the alleged trafficking being brought to light. Two South Philadelphia students had been defrauded of several hundred dollars through the scholarship manipulation, he said.

case and simply seek to weep their way out of an honorable obligation?

England is not a mendicant nation.

She is not begging for alms, nor is she indecently evading an honest obligation. Why be associated with nations which are nothing but a discredit to her?

IF ENGLAND presented her case alone, she would have some ground for consideration. First, she came promptly forward before any other nation and offered to pay her debt. Second, she accepted harder terms than were imposed upon any other nations. Third, she did not whine nor haggle nor seek to deny or evade her obligations.

She is the one nation who may have a right to ask, not for a cancellation of the debt, but for a modification of terms so much harsher than the terms imposed upon or accepted by any other European nation.

The other European nations can obtain some degree of dignity and decency by associating themselves with an honorable debtor like England, but what benefit can England obtain by associating herself with discreditable debt dodgers like these other European nations?

My advice to England, in dealing with America on the question of the debt, is to come prepared to pay, and come alone, but come presenting her claims to consideration, for she is the only nation which has any claim.

Former Chicago Girl Weds Count in Paris

PARIS, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Isabel Neilson, the sculptress, and daughter of Francis Neilson, formerly of Chicago, was married today to Count d'Ostheim, who was born Prince Herman of Saxe-Weimareisenach, and renounced the crown and grand duchy of that name in 1909.

Miss Neilson's father was formerly a member of the British Parliament.

Judge Thomson Reported Sinking

Federal Judge W. H. S. Thomson was said to be in a comatose condition and gradually sinking today at his home, 5435 Aylesboro avenue. He suffered a stroke Thanksgiving Day and has been critically ill since. He is 76.

BALLOT GUARD UNDER FIRE

County election officials today planned prosecution of aldermen and justices of the peace who fail to guard ballot boxes left in their custody after elections, according to Director of Elections William T. Rees.

Justice of the Peace A. W. McMillen, of Carnegie, was to be reported to the County Commissioners, Rees said.

McMillen, according to Rees, signed a receipt for a ballot box in the First District of the First Ward of Carnegie, although the box was left in the basement of St. Luke's School, polling place for the district. When the box was opened, it was discovered more than 250 straight Democratic tickets had been marked for Republican legislative candidates. Neglect of a ballot box is punishable by a fine of from $100 to $1,000, Rees said.

Shuler Radio Ban Upheld in Appeal

Accuser Finds Himself Accused at Trial

When Joseph Kurutz, 48, of Chalfant, went into Criminal Court today he intended to be the accuser, not the accused. He was both.

Tomasic admitted the charge, pleaded no defense. But he explained why he had assaulted Kurutz—because Kurutz delivered whisky at 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning to Tomasic's neighbor and disturbed the Tomasic slumbers, Tomasic said.

The neighbor, Andrew Simak, 26, admitted Kurutz delivered whisky to him. So Judge Frank P. Patterson instructed Simak to file a charge of violating the liquor laws against Kurutz.

MERCURY RISES FROM LOW 12

Winter's icy grasp, felt for the first time over the week-end, was relaxing today, with the prospect that tonight's low temperature would be around 26.

Yesterday's minimum of 12 was the lowest this season. Last night the official minimum was 20, while the mercury fell as low as 10 in outlying districts.

Clear and milder weather prevailed today over the Plains and Northwest, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman's map showed. Similar conditions may be expected here for the next day or so, he said.

Below-zero temperatures were reported from Northwestern Pennsylvania yesterday. From New England came reports of sub-zero weather, in some instances record-breaking.

BALLOT FRAUDS INDICATED IN 2 DISTRICTS

'Phantom' Markings Shown in Rankin And Carnegie

Evidences of vote frauds in the First District of the First Ward, Carnegie, and in the First District of Rankin were reported today by Judges John P. Egan and W. H. McNaugher.

In each case the judges ordered the returns submitted by the election boards be certified to the return board for computation.

In the Rankin opinion, the court said:

"There were 58 ballots bearing 'X' marks in pencil opposite the names of certain candidates and in addition, impressions of 'X' marks, sometimes referred to as 'phantom' marks."

The matter has been called to the attention of the District Attorney.

Judge Egan said the Rankin decision would be applied to other districts where fraud was evident. These other hearings are scheduled for tomorrow.

FIXING CHARGED

Allegations of ballot fixing in the First District, First Ward, Carnegie, after the vote was counted, were aired today at a hearing before the returning board judges, who had summoned the election board.

Democratic candidates, through counsel, had insisted 236 ballots of 581 straight Democratic ballots had been altered to include a vote for the Republican candidates in the Twelfth Legislative District and their contention was supported by John S. Byrnes, judge of election.

Byrnes was ordered to testify by the court after B. Robert Averbach, counsel for Republican candidates, had advised him to stand on his constitutional rights.

Overruling Averbach's motion to dismiss the matter because no proof of fraud had been produced, Judge McNaugher said:

BALLOT BOX SEALED

Byrne testified the board completed the count of more than 700 ballots about 11 o'clock on election night, sealed the ballot box, left it in the basement of St. Luke's school and obtained Squire A. W. McMillen's signature to the certificate. He said there were 581 straight Democratic and 73 straight Republican ballots. The count in the legislative contest was Steedle 102; Boyer 95; Westwood 98; O'Rourke 594; Rectenwald 590; Travers 589; Harmuth 595. The first three were Republican candidates and the latter three Democratic, O'Rourke having both Republican and Democratic indorsements.

The court's action in the Rankin district, coupled with its ruling on the cumulative vote announced last week, brought this result in 100 of the 149 districts tabulated in the Tenth Legislative contest: McBride, 22,131; McClure, 21,399; Steele, 20,877; Riddle, 20,426; Beech, 20,981; Callahan, 20,672; Quinn, 21,369; Craddock, 20,458. McBride and McClure are Republicans, and Quinn and Beech are Democrats.

tude must be flatly stated as soon as possible. MacDonald made efforts to get his entire cabinet together for a meeting tomorrow in the House of Commons.

At this meeting, he hoped, a final draft of the second British war debt note to the United States will be approved so that it may be sent immediately to Washington.

MacDonald this afternoon parried an attempt in the House of Commons to force debate on the question of the December debt payment.

George Lambert, National Liberal member, asked if the House would be consulted before further debt payments are made to America. MacDonald replied:

"It is not in the public interest to have a discussion on the subject at this stage."

Cabinet Members Confer With Hoover on Debts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(INS.)—Numerous conferences on the war debts crisis were held in the capital today, but there was an absence of concrete developments, and there was no indication whatever that this government is weakening in its insistence that debtor nations must pay their December 15 instalments.

Officially, the administration was waiting receipt of the new British note, drafted by Ramsay MacDonald's National Government.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, had a conference with Secretary of the Treasury Mills shortly after noon, at which the situation was discussed. Later, Secretary Mills said the Ambassador had not communicated "anything new" and that the British communication had not been received.

There was also a conference at the White House between President Hoover, Mills and Secretary of State Stimson. It lasted an hour, and is understood to have been primarily concerned with the forthcoming British note and how to meet it.

Still another European debtor joined the international chorus of postponement and cancellation today. The Latvian government notified the United States that it supports the Franco-British position, and asked postponement of the December 15 payment.

Today

THIS IS proved in a moving picture, now showing, produced by Warner Brothers and called "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang."

It shows the unbelievable cruelties of a system under which helpless men are exploited for profit, in chain gangs, the tortures in prison camps, the deliberate and hideous brutality of keepers, debased by the exercise of ruthless power.

Dear A. R.:

I wish everybody in the nation of ours could see 'I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang.'

It is a most revealing and horrifying picture; a most amazing presentation of frightful conditions actually prevailing in certain parts of our country.

Why is it that our country is the most civilized in the world and the most uncivilized? Why is it that we are the most charitable people in the world in the matter of contributions and the most uncharitable in our attitude toward our erring brothers? Why is it that we have the best system of public education in the world and the largest proportion of illiterates of any civilized nation?

Why is it that we are always sentimentally concerned about the unfortunates in foreign lands and callously indifferent to those who suffer from cruelty and injustice among our own people?

Why do we so often fall so far short of the fine principles we profess and the high ideals we are supposed to hold?

Some cynic has said, "How I could love our country if it were not for my countrymen."

What is the matter with our countrymen and OURSELVES?

Is our country too big for us? Is our task too great for our capacity for self-government?

W. R. H.

YOU SHOULD see this picture, advise other men to see it, and thus help to arouse public opinion against a shameful prison system that exploits miserable criminals, for private profit, and pushes vindictive torture, even to murder.

California, to its everlasting credit, offers a different picture of prison labor. A few miles north of here, prisoners have been at work on a great highway, for several years, and a chance to work on that "gang," is eagerly sought by the prisoners.

Each man is paid for his day's work. When his prison term expires, the full amount is paid to him. There are no chains or shackles. The prisoners, well-fed and housed, humanely treated, rarely run away from the payment that awaits them.

IT IS GOOD news for everybody in America that Henry Ford, whose sudden illness was announced Saturday, has undergone successfully, an involved surgical operation, and is out of danger and on the road to certain recovery.

The institution to which he went for his surgical "overhauling," was the Ford Hospital, a splendid institution, erected at his expense, for the benefit of his workers and the general public.

MR. FORD walked to the hospital, chatting with his son, according to reports from Detroit, and like a careful man, requested the surgeon to "attend to anything else that might need doing," in overhauling the most complicated and valuable of all Henry Ford machinery.

Henry Ford's name will be included in every intelligent list of the "ten greatest, most useful Americans," and in every list of the FIVE most useful, also, and every man and woman in the country will rejoice to know that he has passed safely through an unpleasant ordeal.

He has done more than any man ever did, to free human beings from the law of gravitation, conferring upon them the blessing of unrestricted motion.

GIRL'S PARENTS DENOUNCE SLAYER

'Execution Too Good For Him,' Mother of Co-Ed, 15, Says

International News Service.

That was the statement today of Mrs. Charles Rempfer, mother of the slain Frances Rempfer, 15-year-old attractive high school student, whose body was found late Saturday in the woods near here, as she joined with others in asserting that they want no mercy shown her daughter's slayer. Charles Arnwine confessed the slaying, according to police. The girl's father said:

"When he says that Frances' mother or myself mistreated her, he is lying.

"He deserves no pity—no pity at all.

"If it's the last thing I do, I'm going to see that this man pays with his life for the murder of my daughter. I am not a vindictive man, but I want to see justice done."

Funeral services for the slain girl will be held Thursday afternoon in the First Baptist Church of Newtown.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., Nov. 28.—(INS.)—Pennsylvania justice moved swiftly today to punish Charles H. Arnwine, 25-year-old twice-married factory hand, for the slaying of Frances Rempfer, pretty 15-year-old high school student of Newtown, Pa. The accused man has confessed the crime, police said.

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace W. C. Hobensack shortly before noon Arnwine was held without bail on a murder charge for the grand jury. If indicted by the jurors when they are called into session this week, Arnwine will be placed on trial the week of December 5 at the next session of the court of Oyer and Terminer, District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn said.

Arnwine was to have completed a suicide pact by committing suicide, but lost his nerve after killing the girl, police said.

'Alfalfa Bill' Orders Troops to Free Miller

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 28.—(INS.)—Gov. W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray's favorite "persuader" in enforcing his orders—the state militia—will be used, if necessary, to effect the release of Col. Zack Miller, one of the founders of the famous 101 Ranch, who was jailed Saturday by District Judge Claude Duval at Newkirk for alleged contempt of court.

The Governor in a decree issued today ordered the release of Miller, declaring taht Judge Duval had no right to take jurisdiction in the case that involved the ranchman's failure to pay $100 attorney fees and $40 a month alimony to his divorced wife, Mrs. Margaret Blevins-Miller.

Gov. Murray sent the following instructions to Adjt. Gen. Charles F. Barrett:

"Col. Miller is held under false imprisonment by Judge Claude S. Duval. You are instructed to use the state militia, if necessary, to free Miller."

Sheriff Joe McSpadden said:

"Miller is going to stay in jail. I guess the Governor will have to send the militia. I'm taking orders from Judge Duval."

GUARD BLONDE AFTER MATE'S DEATH BOLT

Husband 'Welched,' Killed Warden in Futile Flight

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Not freedom, but death together behind the grim walls of Raymond Street Jail — that was what blonde Lucille McCormick and her felon husband sought.

They agreed, as she smuggled a revolver and chloroform to him Saturday night, that they would end their lives then and there—a suicide pact to be carried out under the very eyes of the law.

This dramatic touch to the attempted break was revealed today when authorities made public part of the 21-year-old wife's statement. This is why she is being guarded closely today.

'RED' BACKED DOWN

The pact wasn't carried out, according to the statement, because Andrew (Red) McCormick backed down; he wanted to attempt the "break," she said. But it probably explains why he was so quick to send a bullet into his brain after killing Deputy Warden William McConnell in his dash for freedom.

Here is the story of the pact, in the words of Mrs. McCormick, an expectant mother:

"We talked for more than an hour. (This was in the jail just before the outbreak.) We talked about a suicide pact. As a matter of fact, we agreed then and there to commit suicide.

"After I gave Red the gun, he said, 'No, I'm going to make the break.'

"I said, 'Let's go through with the pact.' I tried to get the gun away from him, but he wouldn't give it up . . . Then the trouble started."

Prior to the fateful night, she had entered into his plot to escape. She wrote him:

"Even if the punks have forgotten you, I'll stick with you, even if I have to lose my life in the attempt."

And he wrote her:

"We'll stick to each other to the very end. I was always a good gambler and this will be the gamble of my life."

815 CONVICTS ESCAPE BLAZE

SPEIGNER, Ala., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Fire today destroyed the frame cell block building in the state penitentiary here, but the 815 convicts quartered in the structure were marched to safety.

Origin of the fire was undetermined.

Fire apparatus from Montgomery arrived too late to be of service in saving the building, but aided guards and voluntary convict firemen in preventing the spread of the blaze to other frame structures inside the prison enclosure.

Convicts were marched into the prison grounds enclosed by a 12-foot barbed wire fence in the front and a high board fence in the rear.

Officials at the prison said the convicts were orderly and none escaped during the excitement incident to the fire.

'NICE, MARRIED GIRL NOW,' SAYS CLARA

Still Has Plenty Of 'It,' But Aims At Quiet Life

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Clara Bow, Hollywood's personal pronoun girl, who used to carry on like a house afire, has reformed.

From now on she's going to be a nice, quiet, married lady.

Said the flaming (just her hair) Clara when she arrived today from the coast:

"No more hot-cha."

Clara was in hot water for three years. The last time she was in New York—a long time ago—she was in boiling water.

IT'S ALL OVER

But that's all a lot of water under the bridge, and from now on—but let her tell it:

"I've had plenty of trouble for the past three years—and some of it was my own fault.

"But that's all over my shoulder, and I have found out that hot-cha doesn't pay. I'm young, but I'm getting older. I'm going to lead a quiet life—just like a nice married girl.

"Of course I've still got a lot of pep. But I'll take it out in dancing.

"I've found out you can get a big kick out of reading. I read 11 books on the train east."

Clara arrived accompanied only by her maid, Marion Deauburen, who has been with her for six years. The maid said Clara had suffered from insomnia during the trip.

SAILS IN TWO WEEKS

Rex Bell, Clara's cowboy-actor husband, will join her in two weeks, when they will sail for Europe. He is finishing a picture at Hollywood.

BLAST BURNS GOV. CONLEY

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—An explosion from the gas furnace he was examining sent Gov. William G. Conley to bed today with painful burns about the face and arms and severe bruises from the shock of the blast.

Finding the house chilly, the Governor went to the furnace room of the mansion late last night. He stood at the side of the furnace and carefully opened the door with a board.

As the door swung open the explosion occurred, hurling the 100-pound door about a dozen feet and throwing the Governor several feet further than that.

Although he was not rendered wholly unconscious, Gov. Conley made three attempts to arise before he was able to reach the furnace and shut off the gas.

"I don't want to say anything again them.

"They were swell guys. They didn't hurt me a bit. They told me swell stories about football games."

George T. Clarke and Allen W. August, Brooklyn insurance men, were indicted for abducting Jackie and holding him prisoner for two days before freeing him.

Precipitation for the last 24 hours was limited to light rain at Hatteras, Miami and San Francisco. A low pressure area is moving in over Northern Alberta and another low appears off the southern coast of Florida.

Aviatrix Accepts Bid to Exercises Honoring Students

GREENVILLE, Pa., Nov. 28.—Amelia Earhart Putnam, whose father was graduated from Thiel College and whose grandfather had much to do with the establishment in Western Pennsylvania of the Lutheran faith on which the college is founded, will be the speaker at convocation exercises at Thiel, December 11.

Mrs. Putnam, who first won fame in aviation as Amelia Earhart, has accepted an invitation to deliver the convocation address at the college when students of high academic standing are honored.

Her grandfather, the Rev. David Earhart, was a founder of the Pittsburgh Synod, United Lutheran Church, and preached in churches of Butler and Armstrong County from 1847 to 1850. He then went to Kansas as a missionary. Mrs. Putnam's father, the late Edwin S. Earhart, and his sister, Mrs. Charles Rose, of Kansas City, attended Thiel, the father being graduated in the class of 1886. He later became a noted corporation lawyer in California.

Mrs. Rose and five surviving members of Mr. Earhart's class have been invited to the convocation exercises to be held in the college gymnasium. One of the latter is Dr. Henry Elson, of New York, a noted historian.

RAILWAYS HEAD HITS BUS PLAN

The Pittsburgh Railways Company is in desperate financial situation and any opposition would be a serious blow to the city's transportation, Thomas Fitzgerald, the railways' general manager, declared in Common Pleas Court today.

Fitzgerald testified in the railways' application to make permanent a temporary injunction against operation of buses by the Community Service Association. He said the railways was not able to earn the interest on its bonds.

The courtroom was so crowded with spectators and witnesses that Judge James H. Gray moved to a larger room.

The temporary injunction did not prevent the association from hauling its witnesses and officers to the scene of the hearing in one of its buses.

The railways want the injunction extended until the Public Service Commission rules on the railways' application to refuse the association permission to operate.

The association plans to operate buses for members only—$1 a year membership and weekly tickets for $1.55.

HOSPITAL AIDES HELD IN FATAL BEATING

Deny Brutality Charge In Death of Patient

International News Service.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Nov. 28.—Strenuously denying any brutality, Waverly Brown, 31, of Fayetteville, N. C., and Nino Russoli, 23, of Allentown, attendants at the Allentown State Hospital, were held in $2,000 bail each today at a hearing here on charges of manslaughter growing out of the death of Michael Plouka, 43, of Nesquehoning, on Thanksgiving Day at the institution. The pair was committed to jail when unable to produce bail.

The warrants were sworn out by Dr. Henry I. Klopp, pathologist, who is superintendent of the hospital. They alleged that by "maltreatment" and "beating" the defendants caused the death of Plouka.

PATIENTS TESTIFY

Other patients told Lehigh County officials that the accused men set upon Plouka "like a pack of wolves." The pair even wagered bets as to who could "hit him the harder," some of the patients charged.

The defendants charge other patients beat Plouka.

Sixteen witnesses, patients and officials, of the institution will be called when a further hearing is held, it was indicated. Undertaker Gallagher, of Nesquehoning, who buried Plouka, also will be summoned.

BEATEN IN BATH

When admitted on November 23, Plouka needed a warm bath to calm him, and Brown and Russoli were assigned to the task, hospital officials said. The patient was taken into the tubroom where the maltreatment is alleged to have taken place. Plouka was still in the tub room when Brown and Russoli quit their shift that evening, the defendants have admitted.

Initial charges were made by other patients. After a preliminary investigation by the hospital authorities, Coroner Alexander M. Peters was notified. A post-mortem revealed Plouka died of a ruptured liver, supposedly due to the alleged beatings.

OHIO GIRL, 23, IN DEBUT AT 'MET'

Young Star Knocks Wood on Eve of Big Chance

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—All day today Rose Bampton had to keep resisting an impulse to reach out and knock on wood. Here it was only her twenty-third birthday, and tonight she was to make her debut at the Metropolitan Opera House.

The tall, brown-haired contralto, who was born in Cleveland and grew up in Buffalo, said she felt "so humble." She was thinking of all the great men and women who have sung at the "Met." She said:

"I am nervous, but I expect I ought not to admit that. I feel like knocking on wood every time I think about getting a chance to get into the Metropolitan. It's all so grand, I can't help feeling sometimes that something is going to happen.

"I especially feel that way when I think about all the other girls in this country who would like to have my opportunity."

YOUNGEST SINCE TALLEY

She was to portray Laura, wife of the doge of Venice, in Ponchielli's "La Gioconda." In the same cast are Lauri-Volpi and Rosa Ponselle.

Next to Marion Talley, Miss Bampton is the youngest girl in recent years to appear as a prima donna at the Metropolitan. Her dark brown eyes glowed as she told how her family had done wonders to encourage her in singing.

When she was small her father, Samuel W. Bampton, moved from Cleveland to Cincinnati, where he opened a day-cell battery company. Later he was with the Bethlehem Steel Company. She went through high school at Buffalo and for six years has been studying at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

NEW CITY, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The opening of the trial of Sydney Herbert Homewood, dashing society riding master, charged with the betrayal of Charlotte Gibson, his pupil, was postponed today until tomorrow.

Barra said that Homewood had expressed his desire to marry his pupil, but that her father declared such a step must only be "a temporary marriage."

The lawyer said that at least one friend of Miss Gibson would be called as a witness for the defense.

Mrs. McAdoo May Undergo Operation

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, wife of Senator-elect McAdoo and youngest daughter of the late President Woodrow Wilson, was under observation in a Los Angeles hospital today preliminary to a possible operation for appendicitis.

If an operation is deemed advisable, it was stated, it probably will be performed tomorrow.

Fence Saves Boy In Two-story Fall

CINCINNATI, Ohio. — Edgar Agner, 2, owes his life to a spear-pointed iron fence upon which he fell when he tumbled from a second-story window of his parents' home. The picket, which the baby missed by a fraction of an inch, caught his dress, leaving him suspended in midair until the goods tore and he fell to the ground.

British Push Plan To Raise Coal Price

LONDON.—(INS.)—A plan for increasing the price of inland coal and helping British coal exports has been outlined by the central council set up under the Coal Mines Act of 1930, and it is hoped that details may be worked out in time to have the proposed scheme authorized by the present Parliament.

Re-Open Mooney Case, 15 U. S. Leaders Ask

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(INS.)—Gov. James Rolph, Jr., of California, has been asked by 15 prominent Americans to re-open the Mooney-Billings bombing case.

In a letter to the California executive made public today, it was charged the facts involved were not covered in the advisory report made by Matt I. Sullivan, former judge of the California Supreme Court.

This report was declared to have caused the recent pardon application of Tom Mooney to be denied by the Governor.

An open letter to Judge Sullivan, signed by the same group, was also made public. His report was attacked as "inaccurate, unfair and prejudiced." A copy of the Sullivan letter was forwarded to Gov. Rolph.

The signers of the two communications, acting through the National Mooney-Billings Committee, were John Dewey, Fremont Older, Norman Hapgood, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Oswald Garrison Villard, Fannie Hurst, Henry T. Hunt, Aaron Sapiro, Ernest Jerome Hopkins, Lemuel Parton, Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, and four members of the American Civil Liberties Union National Board—Dr. Harry F. Ward, the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, Roger N. Baldwin and Arthur Garfield Hays.

David Warfield, at 66, Shuns Comeback Role

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The name David Warfield will nevermore gleam in electric lights, says the famous actor, 66 today.

In his comfortable eight-room apartment he said:

"Why should I come back to the theater? I have enough to live on, though they took away some of my surplus in 1929. I have worked hard, and I deserve a rest.

"Then I owe something to my public in not coming back. I have seen Bernhardt and Ellen Terry try it. It was heartbreaking. I prefer to be remembered at my best."

The star of "The Music Master" and "The Auctioneer" believes there wouldn't be so much trouble filling the theaters today if they would give the public sentiment "instead of cynicism and their so-called realism."

ROBINSON AIDS ROOSEVELT LAY PLANS

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 28. — (AP.) — Senator Robinson, Arkansas, the Democratic leader, said today after a visit to the cottage of President-elect Roosevelt, that he expected to set up several unofficial committees before the short session opened to begin the formulation of legislation on farm relief, beer, budget matters and the reorganization of governmental departments.

The Senator was one of a large group of visitors who talked with Mr. Roosevelt during the morning. He returned to the cottage later for an afternoon conference on general legislative matters.

DISCUSS FARM RELIEF

In the other group were Henry A. Wallace, an Iowa agricultural editor; Henry Morgantheau, Jr., New York, and M. L. Wilson, of the Montana State Agricultural College. They were called to Warm Springs to discuss farm relief with the President-elect.

Robinson said he thought the chances for the enactment of legislation legalizing beer at the special session were good and that he regarded a filibuster as the only thing that might stand in the way of passage. The Senator added that he did not know of any one in the Senate who would be likely to lead a filibuster.

FARLEY ARRIVES

The unofficial committees which Senator Robinson proposes to create would make a study of the subjects to which they would be assigned with an idea of expediting the passage of measures along those lines.

Among the others who arrived at Warm Springs today were James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee; Mrs. Farley and Frank A. Walker, treasurer of the committee.

Wife Sees Roosevelt As Plane Commuter

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 28.—(Universal.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President-elect, stepped from a passenger airplane at Newark airport last night after what she described as "a delightful trip" from Warm Springs, Va.

Mrs. Roosevelt, eager to be on time for her classes today, intimated to newspapermen that her husband may use the airplane for week-end trips to the Georgia town when he occupies the White House.

'Smiling Dan,' Two Of Family Stricken

Patrolman Daniel D. McGreevy, 217 South St. Clair street, known as "Smiling Dan" to hundreds of motorists who passed him daily while he served as traffic officer at Point Bridge, is in bed at home with influenza today. Two other members of his family also are victims of the malady. McGreevy, transferred to an East End radio scout car about a year ago, became ill Thanksgiving Day. His mother, Mrs. Catherine McGreevy, 76, contracted influenza while nursing him and a brother, John, 32, also is ill.

Woolworth Heiress Not to Wed Prince

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(INS.)—Another $50,000,000 romance was exploded today when Miss Barbara Hutton, the F. W. Woolworth heiress, returned from Europe aboard the Bremen and denied her engagement to Prince Alexis Mdvani.

The engagement report, current for several months, gained considerable credence when Barbara appeared at her twenty-first party in London on November 14 wearing a blood-red ruby on her third finger.

VON SCHLEICHER SEEKS POWER

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, the "power" behind the present Junker cabinet, moved among the leaders of the various parties today seeking their pledge of toleration for a government headed by him.

The defense minister of Chancellor Franz von Papen spent his time through the week-end trying to find out what conditions each party would impose for support. He appeared to be seeking a wide basis for government that would give him a comparatively free hand during the stress of the winter.

In the event Gen. von Schleicher is not satisfied with the measure of parliamentary support he is promised, President von Hindenburg was represented as ready to consider Chancellor von Papen again. The Chancellor and his cabinet are now serving temporarily, having resigned last week.

HOLDING FIRM CURB ASKED BY POWER BOARD

By FULTON LEWIS
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The Federal Power Commission today asked Congress, in its annual report, to amend the Federal Power Act to give it specific jurisdiction over holding companies, their relations with operating companies and their issuance of stocks and securities.

The proposal would place the power commission in a position over the power industry parallel to that which the inter-state Commerce Commission holds over the railroads.

The report urged various other amendments to the power pact, the most important being an enlargement of its jurisdiction over construction and operation costs of licensee companies.

BASE CHANGE ASKED

In this connection, the report asked that in the act's definition of "net investment" used in the regulation of rates charged to the public, and the issuance of securities the present basis of "legitimate original cost" be changed to "actual legitimate and prudent original cost."

The move was designed to block the padding of original costs by subterfuge payments of large but unnecessary sums to co-subsidiary companies, "legitimate" but highly wasteful, for the purpose of making the original cost of a project appear high.

The major amendment asked in the report would give the commission power of regulation over the holding company in relation to the operating company and through the operating company over all phases of distribution to the consumer as a first consideration.

INSULL INFLUENCE

It also would give jurisdiction over the holding company "in relation to the investing public, which is principally interested in the securities of such holding companies."

The latter provision, it was learned, was prompted largely by the Insull Power structures' collapse, and the consequent loss of millions of dollars by investors.

CIPHER NO. 15 WAS PUZZLER

Not so good.

Cipher No. 15 lived up to the reputation of the number. It was unlucky to most of the fans. And how!

Maybe there's a reason. The letter juggling was difficult—despite the hints given. A solution is presented today.

And also No. 16—which is NOT hard.

Do the new cipher in about thirty-seven minutes. It won't take that long, probably only a few seconds, if you happen to strike the right key.

As to hints—

You should not need any. It's similar to a previous cipher which brought many solutions.

Meanwhile, start work on No. 16.

A hint or two will be given tomorrow—if you need them. Should you solve this one before then, let's hear about it.

FLORIDA STORM WRECKS BOATS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 28.—(INS.)—A long strip of coastline of Northeastern Florida and Southern Georgia today was strewn with wreckage left in the wake of high winds which whipped the Atlantic to a destructive fury.

Numerous small boats were washed ashore and larger vessels floundered in the storm which was marked by waves of mountainous proportions and immensely high tides.

The Nepenthe, a shrimp fishermen's boat, sank during the storm and the lumber schooner August G. Hilton was loosened from her moorings and deposited on a sand bar at Fernandina, Fla.

A number of small boats were water-logged at St. Augustine, where the breakers hurtled over a seawall and water flooded the moat surrounding Fort Marion.

Along the southern coast of Georgia, the great waves were reported to have demolished numerous beach cottages.

Chauffeur Hits Traffic Sign, Then Quits

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—"Watch this—it's going to cost you about $200."

Having spoken, Mrs. Cyrus Pierce's chauffeur drove her costly sedan over a curb and knocked down a traffic signal.

The socially prominent banker's wife was too astounded for words. Backing away from the signal, the chauffeur, now being sought by police, drove Mrs. Pierce home and then "resigned." He was recently employed by the Pierces.

Mrs. Pierce is still wondering what it was all about.

BANK BANDITS SENTENCED

TIONESTA, Pa., Nov. 28.—Terms of 15 to 30 years in the penitentiary were imposed upon a trio of men who looted the Gold Standard Bank, of Marienville, of $7,500 on November 3, after holding the cashier of the bank and his family prisoners all night.

Pleading guilty to charges of participation in the crime, Frank Sunday, of Akron, O.; Marshal Van Meter, of Canton, O., and Robert Wilson, of Marienville, each were sentenced at a special session of the Forest County Circuit Court.

Frank R. Johnson, cashier of the looted bank, his wife and daughter, Eleanor, 18, and Fred Pickens, 17, a friend, who were held captive in the Johnson apartment above the bank all night prior to the robbery, identified the trio.

When the hour for the time locks on the vault to open arrived, Johnson was forced to go to the bank and open it.

When Sunday began to spend money freely recently he was suspected and trailed. Arrest of the trio followed.

Telephone Operator Frustrates Robbery

SOMERSET, Pa., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Because a telephone operator at Confluence notices things out of the routine, two youths are in the Somerset County Jail charged with breaking and entering and attempted robbery.

SLUMP VICTIMS AIDED BY COX

Behind every man in the long breadline that assembles at Old St. Patrick's every day there is a real human-interest story. Of the 2,500 to 3,000 hungry men who patiently wait in that line for their daily bread none are there by choice. It isn't a line of hobos. Many of the men in it have seen the time when such a plight was undreamed of. But they were caught in the whirlpool of depression and through the daily efforts of Father Cox they are kept from starving.

Many of the men in that line are skilled mechanics. Many are finely educated, many come from the so-called "white collar" class—but with all their skill and education they can't find jobs. In the meantime they must be fed, in some instances they must be given shelter and with winter setting in they nearly all need clothing.

And it isn't only the breadline that worries Father Cox. He has hundreds and hundreds of families that must be cared for. Day by day the urgency of this work increases and day by day the funds to carry it on grow less.

Single-handed, Father Cox is waging a big battle against poverty. He is winning, but it is a tough, uphill fight and he needs plenty of help. These are some of the reasons why the Sun-Telegraph has inaugurated a drive for his unemployment relief fund. Every subscription for the Sun-Telegraph that comes in on the blank on this page gives to him for his work a liberal cash commission. In fact, Father Cox says that the commission he gets from each subscription will feed three families one day.

MAN AND WIFE SLAIN WITH AX

McALESTER, Okla., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Joe House, 74, former McAlester chief of police, and his wife were found dead today in a bedroom of their home, the victims of an ax slayer.

The bodies were discovered by John Meyers, McAlester sanitary officer.

Finding House's small outlying grocery store closed, Meyers, a close friend of the former police chief, went to the home nearby. Noticing a bottle of milk still on the porch, Meyers went around the house to discover the broken window and the bloody ax.

He then entered through the window and found the bodies.

HOUSE EXHIBIT EXTENDED

New and interesting hillside housing exhibits have been added to the city planning and housing exhibit at the Fine Arts Galleries of Carnegie Institute. The opportunity to exhibit these studies, made under direction of Henry Wright, of New York, widely recognized planning and housing authority, has prompted Director Saint-Gaudens to continue this exhibition for a third week, ending December 3.

The new material was added as a supplement to the model large scale housing illustrations of Chatham Village in Pittsburgh, Sunnyside in New York, and Radburn in New Jersey.

It is stated at the galleries there have been over 4,000 visitors to this exhibition, which was assembled by the city and county planning commissions and the Citizens' Committee on City Plan, in connection with the recent local meetings of the national conference on city planning.

RICH ABDUCTION VICTIM DEAD

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Alexander Berg, 59, St. Louis fur dealer, kidnaped last year and released without paying ransom, died in a hospital here yesterday of an infection of his right knee contracted several years ago.

Five men were sentenced to the penitentiary for kidnaping Berg November 6, 1931, from his automobile. After he had been held prisoner in a St. Louis flat four days, the kidnapers were tricked into releasing him without payment of the $5,000 ransom demanded. Berg was ill at the time.

Friends quoted him as saying recently he had never recovered from the shock of being held by the abductors.

LYTTON REPORT UP TO LEAGUE

GENEVA, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The council of the League of Nations referred the widely-discussed Lytton report on Manchuria today to a special assembly of the league.

The council then dismissed the commission, which had gone to Manchuria under the chairmanship of the Englishman, Lord Lytton, and had spent weeks gathering data on the Sino-Japanese dispute involving that huge territory.

The decision of the council stipulated that the commission, whose American member was Gen. Frank R. McCoy, should consider itself subject to recall if needed.

LEGION OFFICER MAKES REPLY TO CHURCH

Objecting to a comparison made by Samuel Harden Church connecting American war veterans with the "mercenary" soldiers of the Roman Empire, William L. Goodstene, vice commander of the United American Veterans' Association, has answered Church's proposal for a constitutional amendment to stop payment of bonuses and pensions to uninjured soldiers.

Church quoted Gibbon, the historian, as attributing the fall of the Roman Empire to the mercenary demands of its soldiers. Church's ideas on an amendment to prevent what were described as "raids" on the Treasury which follow every war" were printed in the Carnegie Magazine.

CHARGES MISQUOTATIONS

Goodstene declared Church misquoted Gibbon. It was only after Rome ceased to make war with its own soldiers and started to use alien nations as warriors that the menace to the Roman government arose, Goodstene said.

Goodstene, in his answer, says:

"I have read with much interest your remarks that Gibbon, the historian, attributes the fall of the Roman Empire to the mercenary demands of her soldiers.

"As a layman, I am shocked and surprised that a scholar like yourself could so misconstrue or misquote that eminent historian. If I remember correctly, he tells us about the hordes of unpaid soldiers, composed of a hodge-podge of the world's populations and impressed into the service of Rome and who, failing to receive their pay and while still under arms and led by their generals, marched upon Rome and threatened its destruction.

SEIZED ROME FOR DAY

"Upon one such occasion, the city itself was seized by the unpaid soldiers and auctioned off to the highest bidder, who subsequently was crowned Emperor, though only for a day.

"Rome cared for and fed her old, infirm, and crippled veterans. The intelligentsia of Rome at that time no longer bore arms in her defense and the art of war was delegated to alien races, who for pay, or spoils of war, carried the Roman Eagles throughout the world. These were the mercenary troops to which Gibbon referred.

RESENTS COMPARISON

"To compare Rome's soldiers, unpaid and uncivilized barbarians as they were, with our own ex-service men of all our wars is an unwarranted attack upon American veteranism that shall not pass unchallenged.

"As to the amendment you propose to the Constitution I ask you, dear professor, who will carry the guns and fight in the next war to preserve this Constitution?"

WINS 3D TRIAL IN SLAYING

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The State Supreme Court today granted a new trial to Harold E. Williams, twice convicted of the charge of murdering his brother-in-law, William F. Prophet.

Williams' sister, Mrs. Prophet, also charged with murder in connection with the killing, is serving a life term.

Williams shot Prophet at his home two years ago. Both Williams and his sister made statements, which they later repudiated, that they planned to kill Prophet because he had ill-treated the wife and also in order to obtain $3,000 life insurance. Williams, their repudiated statements said, was to receive $500 of the insurance money.

It was the second time the Supreme Court granted Williams a new trial.

GREAT BRITAIN'S NEW H. M. S. SEAHORSE, GREAT SUBMARINE . . . LAUNCHED AT KENT

NOTED EDITOR'S RITES THURSDAY

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Edwin A. Van Valkenburg's political and journalistic career has ended at the age of 65. He died Saturday night of heart disease after an illness of several months.

Friend of Theodore Roosevelt, editor and publisher of the newspaper, the Philadelphia North American, Van Valkenburg for years was an influential figure in the public affairs of this city and Pennsylvania.

Burial will be at Wellsboro, Pa., his home town, Thursday. Messages of condolence included one from President and Mrs. Hoover and another from Mrs. Edith Roosevelt, widow of the former President.

While holding a legislative clerkship at the state capitol, Van Valkenburg helped organize what was known as the "Seventy-Six" group of legislators who for two years kept Quay out of the United State Senate.

His entrance into journalism followed upon his alliance as political manager for John Wanamaker in the merchant's fight against the political machines of Quay and the late Senator Boies Penrose. In 1899 he persuaded the Wanamaker interests to purchase the North American to help fight the Republican leadership in the state.

Van Valkenburg resigned from the paper in 1924 and it was sold to the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

BYRD REPLIES TO VET CHIEF

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd asserted today in a reply to a statement made in Richmond, Va., by Louis A. Johnson, national commander of the American Legion, that if he was a "stalking horse," as charged by the legion commander, "then I am stalking for the suffering hordes of the unemployed of this country."

Johnson had spoken of Admiral Byrd as "unwittingly and unintentionally" the "stalking horse for the one person out of 3,000 of our population who is against the veterans of America."

The admiral, who is chairman of the National Economy League, said he felt "constrained to thank Commander Johnson for his mild statement that, compared to the statements that 1,000,000 veterans have been making around the country, this stalking horse statement is a grand and wonderful compliment."

In replying to Johnson's statements concerning the National Economy League, Admiral Byrd said:

"The people of this country must combine, as in war, to cut the cost of government."

ABORTING a Cold

(with lemon juice)

It's just a waste of time taking a cold remedy that can only relieve. To end your cold, abort it. The lemon juice treatment will do it. Squeeze two full-size lemons in a large glass of very hot water and drink without sugar. First, take three tablets of Pape's cold compound an hour apart. This clears the head, dries the nasal passages, reduces any fever. The lemon juice then drives all cold symptoms right out of the system. Bedtime is best. This treatment will abort, the worst cold, overnight. One cold compound tablet will check a cold at any time, for several hours; then when night comes you can get rid of it by abortion. Any druggist has Pape's cold compound. It's perfectly safe. Try it, and you'll never go back to half-way remedies.

VETS PUSH NEW DEMANDS IN FEAR OF CUT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—To forestall threatened reductions in allowances to former soldiers of all wars, the American Legion is undertaking a counter-attack to gain new benefits for new World War veterans in the coming Congress.

The plan as described today at legion headquarters, involves four major points — including the bonus—which would cost upward of $2,500,000,000 in 10 years.

The legion, said officials, is proceeding on the theory that the justice of the things they think are needed should decide the fate of legislation rather than any need for economy.

As outlined, the program calls for:

1—Immediate cash payment of the adjusted compensation certificates, requiring around $2,000,000,000.

2—Pensions for widows and orphans of World War veterans, which the veterans' administration estimates would cost $13,531,000 the first year and $454,060,000 the first 10 years.

3—Amendment of existing law to permit the presumption that veterans asking for hospitalization or other benefits for some constitutional diseases contracted those ailments while in the service. This would cost near $12,000,000 the first 10 years, it is estimated.

The bonus, Legion officials say, "can wait a while." But, proposing to push the other legislation for immediate action, they say that justice demands payment of the compensation certificates, too. When that comes along, they remark:

GREEN SUBMITS TWO-FOLD JOB RELIEF PLAN

CINCINNATI O., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—A "twofold unemployment relief program" was outlined and recommended today by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, as the organization's convention entered its second week.

Green said one phase concerns immediate relief and the other permanent provision for unemployed.

As a "short term" policy, Green explained, the federation's executive council has recommended appropriations for unemployment relief by federal and state agencies; increased development of public works programs and the five-day week and six-hour day.

JOB INSURANCE PLAN

In accordance with the council's "long term" planning, he continued, unemployment insurance administered "through state agencies backed by federal enactments," and setting up of a national economic council likely will be advocated. He added:

"The shorter work week and work day might well be included in the long term planning, too."

It was with various aspects of this latter subject that the delegates chiefly were concerned today.

Green said he had heard criticism claiming that a compulsory unemployment insurance plan proposed by the executive council would affect only those who are employed now and who may become unemployed.

URGES GREATER RELIEF

He answered this by saying the federation already has advocated passage of the Costigan-La Follette bill for unemployment relief in Congress and will insist at the coming session that further relief legislation be enacted to provide an adequate sum for pressing existing needs.

Secretary of Labor Doak was to address the convention today, and it was expected he would outline the government's view on labor problems.

Will Rogers Runs Second in Word Tiff With Law

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 28.—(Universal.)—Will Rogers may be a first-class wise cracker, but he ran second in a skirmish with a traffic cop.

Said cop stopped Will for skipping along with lights that he considered much too bright. Said Will, in his finest and brightest style:

"Well, I guess I have a right to be all lit up with my lights shining bright. "I'm coming to the premiere of my new picture."

Said the cop, with a lack of of enthusiasm:

"Is that so? Here's a ticket, but it is not for admission to any premiere."

Our 83rd Christmas!

From Old London Bookshops . . .

From Old English Family Libraries . . .

More Than 3,000

Fine Old English Books

Our Book Buyer, while in London this spring, canvassed the old book stalls, second-hand bookshops, and a number of private English libraries in search of old books of interest and value. With the book market at low ebb, and the present favorable rate of exchange, he assembled an extraordinary collection of some of the most incredible bargains in history. Some of these volumes, which include first editions, were in an excellent state of preservation; others he had suitably rebound in stout leather covers. The average age is about 100 years, and some date back as far as 1751. They are marked by the careful printing, wood cuts and steel engravings of that period. They embrace the standard classics and contemporary literature of that period.

At the prices that we are able to put upon them they will be eagerly sought not only by collectors, but also by everyone who prizes finely made books of interest and permanance. They give a touch of dignity and antiquity to end table and library shelves. They especially fit into the atmosphere of old fireplaces and English period rooms.

More Than 600 Volumes
$1.50, $2, $2.50, $3
And Up to $5
Full and Three-Quarter Calf Binding

Also many fine sets of old classics ranging from Tom Jones to Shakespeare and the Bible, at $10, $12.50, $15, $17.50, $25, and similar extremely low prices. These extraordinary values merit immediate investigation.

Of interest in Pittsburgh is news of the engagement of Miss Roberta Meese, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Meese, of Baltimore, and William Bennett Pollard, eldest son of Mrs. Alice Bennett Pollard and the late William Patterson Pollard, of Baltimore, formerly of Pittsburgh.

Pitt Sophomores To Be Guests Of Dean

A colonial dinner at which the original 13 colonies will be represented by governors and aides in costume who will dramatize some bit of a particular colony's history is to be given by Dean Thyrsa W. Amos to the sophomore women of the University of Pittsburgh at Heinz House Tuesday.

At the close of the dinner the whole group will participate in the minuet, square dances and the Virginia reel.

Those who have been chosen as governors of the colonies are: Miss Agnes Calabreese, Virginia; Miss Janet Savage, Massachusetts; Miss Marion Epping, Pennsylvania; Miss Betty Bowser, Connecticut; Miss Francis McLaughlin, New York; Miss Margaret Doescher, Maryland; Miss Freda Goldstein, Rhode Island; Miss Helen Green, Georgia; Miss Mary Gertrude Herron, South Carolina; Miss Helen Seder, Delaware; Miss Anneta Wardley, New Hampshire; Miss Eva Sypniewska, New Jersey, and Miss Alice Park, Maine.

Girls serving as aides are: Miss Helen Braun, Miss Martha Cameron, Miss Anna Calket, Miss Ruth Cousley, Miss Lois Cowan, Miss May Louis Shaake, Miss Helen Milliron, Miss Peggy Dyer, Miss Helen Welfer, Miss Kitty McGuire, Miss Elizabeth von Senden, Miss Eloise Dorrance, Miss Ellen Newman, Miss Lois Milliken, Miss Betty Ossola, Miss Helen Hill, Miss Alice Rosenberger, Miss Mary DeLeon, Miss Virginia Sepp, Miss Harriet Surbled, Miss Annabelle Aolfe, Miss Janet Soloff, Miss Ruth Heckler, Miss Wannetta Parks, Miss Louis Johnson, and Miss Dorothy Kaufmann.

One hundred and two first-year women at the university were presented with "merit panthers" Wednesday afternoon at Heinz House as reward for getting at least a "C" average for the first eight weeks of school and for observing all the freshman regulations.

By these awards the Women's Student Government Association recognizes the growth in orientation of outstanding freshmen.

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 28. — One of the advantages of black clothes lies in the fact that they may be made as simply or as elaborately as possible without giving any appearance of being extreme or fanciful. It is a characteristic that the French dressmakers learned decades ago; more often than not, their tryouts of new fashions are made in black first, before they are done in color. Several houses make duplicates in black of their colored dresses, and show the two dresses at once.

* * *

IN TODAY'S sketches are two costumes of quite opposite natures, both done in black. One is a tailored street dress, done more elaborately than usual; the other is a tailored coat, executed in the simplest possible manner. In spite of this difference, these two costumes are very much at home side by side, and on the same occasions, mainly because they are in the classic black that Paris loves.

* * *

THE DRESS, by Chanel, is in jersey, made elaborately not only by the unusual treatment of the shoulder and sleeve seams, but by the brilliant-set buttons and the white crepe de chine guimpe. Done in the effect of a jacket and skirt, the dress is really one-piece, and buttons at the centerfront. The belt, in black rigid composition with brilliant buttons, follows the coloring of a diamond-and-jet piece of jewelry.

* * *

$225

MADE-TO-ORDER

There are still sufficient skins for a few more coats — to be made to measure in fur workrooms where precise and exquisite workmanship is a matter of course.

Select your coat for style from several Grabowsky adaptations of the Alaska Sealskin models that the French couture so recently sponsored.

An opportunity to buy an Alaska Seal Coat of Grabowsky excellence at this price may not occur again in a lifetime. Not many years ago, similar coats sold for $1200.

ROSS KIDNAPING CLUE IN DEATH

certificate is 62. He had no known relatives living.

There was only one mark of identification on the Ross boy—a vaccination scar. A similar scar was the only mark found on the body of Bromson.

LURED BY FIREWORKS

The promise of fireworks was the lure used by two men who coaxed the 4-year-old child into their horse-drawn vehicle the afternoon of July 1, 1874. His brother, Walter, 6, was kidnaped at the same time, but was found crying on a Philadelphia street corner, eight miles away, several hours later.

On December 18 of the same year two men were shot and killed during a robbery. With his dying breath one of them gasped:

"My name's Joe Douglas. With me is William Mosher. We stole Charley Ross. I don't know where the kid is."

The bodies of the men were identified later by Walter Ross as those of the kidnapers.

A fortune was spent in the hunt for the boy. One trail led to Albany and the territory near Catskill, which was a circumstance that prompted New York police to check the new clue today.

Ross Family Silent On Latest Clue

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Members of the Ross family today maintained the same strict silence as they have done for years when some one comes forth and claims to be Charley Ross, kidnaped in 1874 from his home in Germantown.

Members of the family had nothing to say regarding the possibility that a derelict who died in New York from hunger might have been the long-lost Charley.

Whether Charley is alive or dead has never been definitely settled. Charley's parents died years ago.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: It's about time somebody did something like this . . . I mean what Rachel Crothers, the author of "When Ladies Meet" is planning . . . Miss Crothers, in case you hadn't heard, was head of the Woman's War Relief during the Big Tiff, and she was regarded almost as a saint because of her great work at that time . . . Well, she is going to call out all men and women of the theater to back a movement called "The Theater for Its Own," a drive by show folk throughout the country to aid starving and distressed actors and actresses, whether they are members of any organization in good standing or not! . . . Last year on the air you made the "Man-a-Block-Plan" famous . . . Why not ask Miss Crothers to let you exploit her drive on your new coast-to-coast job beginning Dec. 4th? . . . You're part of the Theater, and it is right up your alley . . . I'll get the details for you . . . I wish the columnists in town would stop giving me a new boy friend every week . . . They're even getting me confused!

Elsie Rossi at the Hollywood just rec'd a pre-Christmas gift—a $3,000 mink coat. Do you think you could get me a job there at nights??? . . . Peggy Joyce would have had to pay Uncle Sam a fine of $51,000 on that jewel which he sold for a grand, if she had claimed it, or did you know that? . . . Rumors (which I doubt) are persistent—that Dr. Wilbur, of Stanford University, will quit, and Hoover will succeed . . . They are god friends. I doubt that Hoover will take his job, unless Wilbur wants it that way.

Here's an item — Contract Bridge is making steady gains through the depression with new books selling plenty of editions. Millions are paying 50 cents for a book of rules that they could have clipped out of the papers! . . . Ernest Schwab called to suggest your recommending Hi Phillips' simile: "As short as a ban on burlesque houses" . . . "Phoch" Howard's mother, now 82, bless her, is coming along all right at Johns Hopkins hosp. . . Please throw a wreath of garlic at Comm. Taylor, who is sending Old Age Pensioners notices — advising them that their awards have been reduced (various amounts) the reason being "Readjustment of Budget" . . . Politicians' and appointees' salaries and jobs must be protected at any cost! . . . They'll see it through . . . oh, sure! . . . That Duke at the Stock Exchange isn't a page boy, anymore. He's now a tube-man, and has done very well investing, etc. . . . You ought to give an orchid to the Welfare Island keepers, who weren't even mentioned in the papers as being the real heroes of the recent outbreak there . . . They settled matters with the rioters long before the police arrived.

Izzy called just now. To say that McKee and O'Brien have both become Indian Chiefs—anything to help balance the budget. Our mayors must have found out that the Indians still have that 24 bucks . . . Incidentally, how are they ever going to get O'Brien into a half-column cut? . . . Heard a swell line of praise for Ben De Casseres, to wit: "He writes like a fugitive from heaven!" . . . Did I tell you about your girl friend, Peggy? . . . Well, it was like this . . . You know, or don't you?—that you can't tell if champagne is dry champagne by sniffing at it—you have to taste it . . . So, at a smart speak the other night Miss Joyce ordered some of the bubble water, and after smelling it yelled: "Take it back, take it back! It isn't dry enough!" . . . Mrs. Roosevelt will get a commercial broadcast job, but will quit it before March 4 . . . She will get $1,500 for a 10-minute weekly mike job.

George Bye says that no magazine is interested in Walker's writings, and that no literary agent knows a thing about it . . . Well, I saw a letter from that mag offering him the $50,000 for six pieces, so there! . . . They may have changed their minds, but they did make that offer . . . A midnight benefit show at the Roxy, Dec. 17, will be for the Junior Federation of the Jewish Philanthropic Societies—give it a mention . . . There is a star in town who runs a repertory theater who charges $10 for auditions! . . . I hear that before "Night Mayor" could be shown here Curry's permission had to be had first, and he is supposed to have agreed . . . Did you hear anything about two members of the Capitol Theater orchestra committing suicide on the same day?

Instead of "swelegant" why not use "It's the Zyzzle," meaning "the last word?" . . . It's the last word in the dictionary—catch on? . . . One of the newer singers on the air has a wife who is so jealous that the warbler's secretary wears an engagement ring . . . Charles G. Shaw is back after 2 years in the old country . . . So you probably will see George Nathan with the tallest man at the first-nights, again . . . I heard Charlie Butterworth's face described as "a mask which doesn't hide anything" . . . The Stroller's Club at Delmonico's, the most aristocratic in the thuttrickle profession, is taking the Artists and Writers Golf Ass'n into its membership . . . It was a prominent Democrat who advised Hoover to invite FDR to that conference . . . Hemingway has sent an answer about Woollcott, but like some of his lines in his books, you simply can't print it, my dear.

The phone firm is losing money on calls for the correct time since that new beer clock went up in Times Sq. . . . Walter Batchelor wishes you'd help him smother the talk that Libby Holman is planning an immediate return to the stage . . . She hasn't been in town since June . . . She will remain in seclusion till the child is born . . . Smith and Seabury conferred in the Empire State last Monday — wonder why? . . . May I have your tickets to the 6-Day Bike grind? . . . Thenx veddy mitch . . . Postal Telegraph is letting you have instruments for your air "editorial rooms" atmosphere gratis, nice? . . . Bill Morrow called. Said that the change down in Washington, D. C., is for the best. It'll supply the authors of "Merry Go-Round" with a lotta new characters . . . Nothing really exciting this afternoon . . . See you at the "Take A Chance" premiere—give me a nod, anyway.—Your Girl Friday.

Miss Stuart Moves Fast In Films

BY HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.

Now Hollywood is admitting that Universal has a real find in Gloria Stuart. Before the year is out, this actress, with the wistful blonde beauty, will have done eight featured leads.

Just returned from New York, where she flew to attend the opening of "Air Mail," Gloria was informed that her seventh important part since January 1 will be the lead opposite Lee Tracy in "Private Jones." And after that—to pile one bit of good news upon another, she will be loaned to RKO to play in the Lionel Barrymore picture, "Sweepings."

Gloria Stuart

Out at Bert Kalmar's house, members of the Baltimore Dairy Lunch Club were reminiscing about old times.

"Remember, Bert," said Harry Ruby, "the time you and George Jessel and I canvassed all New York trying to find a backer for that musical?"

"Yeah," said Kalmar, "and finally that night when we were coming out of a restaurant some fellow behind us dropped a half dollar.

"To a man, we turned and shouted: 'Say, do you realize "Irene" made $3,000,000?'"

Now that his Fox contract is over, Charles Farrell would go to London for six months, probably to try stage work. Lay you odds, though, that the producers never let him leave Hollywood. A lot of people are inclined to underrate Charlie. He ranked fourth in a recent popularity poll conducted among exhibitors.

W. S. Van Dyke cables an amusing incident from the Far North. When the "Eskimo" troupe left here, they stocked up on hundreds of old fan magazines to read during the long winter nights. Now, Van reports, the native women (they're Eskimos) have worn the magazines threadbare trying to copy Hollywood styles in their fur garments.

Gwili Andre has postponed her New York trip and is taking a new house in Beverly Hills instead . . . Ronald Colman says there is nothing new on his suit against Samuel Goldwyn. Even though they are legal foes, he starts "The Masquerader" for Sam today. Elissa Landi and Juliette Compton will be his two leading women.

Gwili Andre

Ralph Morgan has just paid a 20-year-old laundry bill with accrued interest.

It happened on "The Son Daughter" set.

Twenty years ago Morgan, Warner Oland and Frederick Burt were playing in a one-night stand company of "Madame X." When the troupe finally started a two-night engagement in Mount Sterling, Ky., everyone sent his laundry out. But Morgan was summoned to Boston by a wire and arranged for Burt and Oland to forward his garments.

The bill, at that time, was $1.18. But when the three met at M-G-M for the first time in 20 years, it was equal to the price of an expensive dinner.

Lyle Talbot and Wynn Gibson are seen all about Hollywood on various occasions. By the way, Talbot has in his wardrobe 32 turtle-neck sweaters. It won't be such a cold winter after all.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Florenz Ziegfeld's last production, "Show Boat," revival of one of his greatest successes, will return tonight to the stage of the Nixon, where it made its bow to the world originally. Norma Terris and Helen Morgan will be seen in the roles they created.

Next week the Nixon will go tuneless after three weeks in succession of lyrics and the like. The attraction will be Ina Claire, in a Theater Guild production, "Biography," by S. N. Behrman. It is a comedy and will be presented under the auspices of the American Theater Society, being the third in its series.

* * *

While George Sharp smiles his best business smile in the lobby of the Pitt tonight, the customers will be passing in to witness the first presentation in Pittsburgh of "Whistling In the Dark," comedy drama success that is still current in New York. In the leading role, created by Roger Pryor, will be Hugh Banks, returning to the Pitt stage, where he was a fixture for many moons.

Next week the George Sharp Players will be seen in another play not heretofore acted here—Ben W. Levy's "The Devil Passes." Mr. Levy is the author of several successful plays, including "Mrs. Moonlight," which was popular here early last season.

* * *

"Strange Interlude," screen version of the Eugene O'Neill play, goes into its second and final week today. It is showing twice daily with Norma Shearer, Clark Gable and Ralph Morgan in the principal roles.

* * *

Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt, in Philadelphia now, are in their last week of "Reunion in Vienna," following which they will begin rehearsal of that Noel Coward play in which they and the author will be co-starred . . . Joe E. Brown has begun a two weeks' stage engagement in Los Angeles as the star in "Elmer the Great," comedy in which he appeared on the coast two years ago . . . Henry Garat, French actor, will make his American screen debut opposite Janet Gaynor in "Princess at Your Order," romantic film that will have tunes . . . Bert Lytell is laying plans to appear on Broadway in a play to be produced by himself . . . Dick Grace, dare devil aviator, has been hired to write a story for screen production . . . Eddie Cantor, who was first vice president of the Jewish Theatrical Guild, is now president, having succeeded to the office through death of the executive, William Morris.

Sally Blane in Cast With Kate Smith

Sally Blane has been chosen by Paramount to play the romantic feminine lead in the company's production starring Kate Smith, plump queen of radio, under the direction of William A. Seiter. Miss Blane, who was the heroine of "Heritage of the Desert" and "Wild Horse Mesa," will have the role of Kate's sister. Assignment of Miss Blane to the picture continues her romantic combination with Randolph Scott, who also has a big part.

Broadways of the World

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

ABOARD THE S. S. REX, GENOA-BOUND.—Step right up and meet a few of my fellow passengers today. If this column turns out well, I'll do a similar one every week or so. Ready to meet the boys and girls? Let's go.

1. Mr. M. He is an alleged comedian. You find one on every boat. He speaks only Italian, but that makes no difference. His type is universal. He puts on a woman's hat to make the girls laugh. He sneaks up behind you and suddenly barks like a dog. He is what some people call a card.

I watched him as he danced last night. For a middleaged man his antics were amazing. I mentioned the fact to my companion.

"That man must have an income from a wealthy family," I said. "Probably lives for nothing but pleasure. What a fool he is!"

My companion smiled.

"It so happens," he replied, "that he is one of the brainiest men in Italy. His position in the government is very close to the top. He is cold and hard—and sometimes very cruel. As soon as we reach Italy his smile will disappear. He is on his vacation now—and his idea of a vacation is to act like a schoolboy."

We never know . . .

2—The barber. He finds it very difficult to understand American customs. As soon as the boat sailed, I made arrangements with him to shave me every night at 6:15. The first night, at the set hour, there were two men ahead of me. The second night there were three. He had told them nothing about my appointment—and I grew peeved.

"Look here, Joe," I cried, "when I make an appointment for 6:15, I don't mean 8 o'clock. Why don't you keep your appointments?"

He shrugged his shoulders helplessly.

"How can I?" he returned. "Look at all the men who came in ahead of you!" . . .

3—The opera star, Mme. J., let us say. The night before last she consented to sing for the passengers. She is about 40—or perhaps a year or two more. She sang beautifully. The applause was polite. When she had finished, she returned to her table and sat down. Her escort kissed her hand. He seemed bored. So did she.

Last night, a few of the boys found a young girl among the second-class passengers. She, too, could sing. The purser gave his permission, and the girl was brought up to sing for the first-class passengers.

Her name was Maria, and that is the way she was introduced. Maria could not sing nearly so well as Mme. J. On the high notes her voice cracked just a little. The years of training were lacking in this girl.

But she was beautiful. About 17, her eyes were soft and large. She used no makeup whatsoever. Her smile was the laugh of youth. She was perfectly at ease in her $10 gown. When she smiled, you smiled, too. Unconsciously.

When she was finished, the applause was tremendous. Not for the voice—but for the child herself. At least seven men leaped to their feet to guide Maria back to her table. Among the seven was Mme. J.'s escort. He was no longer bored.

Mme. J. went to bed. . . .

4—Mr. P. An American millionaire. I was looking for someone to play backgammon with me. Mr. P. was one of the few people on the boat who understood the game. It was only natural that we should sit down to play together.

I wanted to play for small stakes—or for nothing. But Mr. P. wanted to play for a dollar a point. I told him I was nothing but a columnist. But the millionaire insisted. So we played for the dollar a point.

Mr. P. plays what is known as the gloating game. Every time he fell into a good move he told me he had learned the game in the Racquet Club and that nobody had ever been known to beat a member of that club. Not to be outdone, I told him I had learned the game while sitting on the social register. Mr. P. didn't get the point.

At the end of the first session the millionaire had won $124. I paid him in cash—and he was in high glee. He bought drinks for everyone at the bar and complimented the stewards upon their efficiency. He was indeed a jovial gentleman.

Last night, after the concert, we played again. This time the tide swung the other way. After two hours of play Mr. P. owed me the tidy sum of $348. And his jovality had completely disappeared.

He accused the stewards of stealing his wine. He told half the people in the barroom that they were complete fools—and that he didn't care for the other half either. The more he lost, the more insulting the millionaire became. That he didn't get slugged by someone is one of the miracles of the age. I finally walked out on him.

In a few hours, this boat arrives at Gibraltar. Mr. P. is getting off there. His steward just brought me the money that was owed me. And he tells me that Mr. P. demands a written receipt.

5.—Mr. F. An artist. He introduced himself to me by handing me a copy of one of his booklets. It tells of the noble work he has done, the prominent people he has painted—and it states in no small way that his paintings will go down through the ages. He planted himself in the deck chair next to mine and watched me as I read the booklet.

"You must be a grand artist," I told him. "This booklet certainly praises you to the skies."

He nodded. His eyes glowed with pleasure.

"Who wrote it?" I asked.

"I did," he replied proudly . . .

6—Antonio. My dining room steward. A short talk with Antonio and you learn immediately that he is no ordinary waiter. The man has had a definite education. He talk an excellent English, a fair French, and he gets along in German. He told me one afternoon that his greatest regret was that he had been unable to finish college.

"I wanted so much to complete my study of economics," he asserted as he slapped some caviar on my plate. "Money values and conditions have always interested me more than any other subject. I think, had things been different, I would have made that my life's work."

Unusual for a waiter? You bet it was.

"I suppose," I ventured, "that the economic conditions must be particularly interesting n your own country right now?"

He wagged his head rapidly.

"I should say they are," he returned. "Our country is progressing marvelously in spite of some very low wage scales. It is remarkable how families can actually thrive on so little money."

I asked him how much money he earned.

"Oh," he replied easily, "I have very little to worry about. In American money, my salary is $20 a month" . . .

LILI IS NOW AT WORK IN A BRAND NEW PICTURE, "THE MATCH KING," A WARNER FILM

C. Aubrey Smith Cast In 'Luxury Liner'

A group of outstanding players has been added to the cast of "Luxury Liner," which B. P. Schulberg is producing for Paramount release. Those chosen for important roles include Theodor von Eltz, who will be remembered for his work in "Ladies of the Big House;" C. Aubrey Smith, one of the three leading "fathers" of the screen; Henry Wadsworth, who has appeared in a number of Paramount films; Billy Bevan, for six years a Mack Sennett star; Knute Erickson, former vaudeville headliner and more recently working in "The Match King," and "The Bitter Tea of General Yen;" Jerry Tucker, Paramount's 6-year-old "discovery," and Edith Yorke, one of the screen's leading character women. This group of talent will appear in "Luxury Liner" with George Brent, Zita Johann, Vivienne Osborne and Alice White under the direction of Lothar Mendes.

Grace LaRue Takes Part In Picture

Grace LaRue and Harry Wallace are the latest additions to the cast of Paramount's "Ruby Red," starring Mae West. Miss LaRue is a musical comedy, concert and vaudeville star who will make her film debut in this production. Her last stage appearance was in John Golden's "Dear Me," in which she played with her husband, Hale Hamilton. With Hamilton established in pictures, Miss LaRue has decided to desert the stage, temporarily at least, for a try at the films. Wallace is a former stage performer who was seen last in "Night After Night." Owen Moore, Noah Beery, David Landau, Dewey Robinson and "Fuzzy" Knight are already in the cast of "Ruby Red." Lowell Sherman will direct.

Eleanor Holm Busy At Film Lessons

Eleanor Holm is certainly keeping busy. She is taking voice lessons, golf and tennis as well as studying acting for that approaching career on the screen.

Former School Head Admits Mail Thefts

Paul J. Murphy, 32, former principal of Titusville High School, whose forced resignation recently precipitated a three-day student strike, pleaded guilty in Federal Court to stealing letters from a mailbox in the Titusville post-office. He was paroled for three years by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker.

Murphy, who is in poor physical condition, told the court he had taken five letters in all, containing about $35, after he had found a key in a lockbox rented by a bank.

MANN LOTTERY TRIAL OPENS

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Attorneys for Conrad H. Mann, Kansas City business leader, failed in an attempt to halt his trial today on federal lottery charges as Judge Francis J. Coleman overruled their plea in abatement which challenged the sufficiency of evidence before the grand jury.

Immediately after the ruling, Mann and his three codefendants, Frank E. Hering, Raymond Walsh and Bernard C. McGuire, were called before the bench to have the charges against them read, thus formally opening their trial.

The court then ordered them to appear at 2 p. m., at which time selection of a jury was scheduled to begin.

The four are charged with making interstate shipment of lottery tickets, and with conspiracy to violate the lottery laws.

Mann appeared extremely nervous as he heard the charges. He is director general of the Eagles. Hering, editor of the Eagles Magazine, one-time coach and professor of English at Notre Dame University, showed no sign of emotion.

VOTE MACHINE APPEAL LOST

A decision of the Allegheny County Common Pleas Court that the county must pay the $400,000 balance on the 1,100 voting machines it purchased from the Poole Engineering and Machine Company was upheld today by the State Supreme Court.

The company had already collected the amount involved when the county did not post bond for an appeal from the decision in a mandamus suit.

The Supreme Court dismissed the appeal of Ada B. Bassett and other taxpayers in their suit which sought to restrain the old Board of County Commissioners from making the payment.

During argument on the appeal at the October term of the Supreme Court, counsel for the appellants was taken to task by the justices for not having pressed the mandamus action won by the Poole Company.

SNIPERS WOUND W. VA. MINER

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—A miner, one of about 50 going to work in mine cars, was shot through the chest today at the mine of the Coalburg Kanawha Mining Company at Coalburg, where a strike has been in progress.

The injured man was Will E. Carr, 45, who was brought to a Charleston hospital for treatment.

J. M. Willis, superintendent of the mine, said about 50 shots were fired from ambush, but Carr was the only one hurt. The mine was order closed for the day after the shooting. A detachment of state troopers began an investigation.

"One COLD after Another"

Is Usually the Same Cold Repeating Itself!

—Due to Ineffectual Treatment Methods!

Many times a person suffers three or four colds a season and thinks it is a different cold each time. As a matter of fact, it is often the same cold repeating itself, due to inadequate treatment methods. Only half-cured in the first place, the cold keeps coming back and all the time it keeps weakening your system and exposing you to more serious trouble.

A Cold Calls for a COLD Remedy!

There is no subject on which the public is in more need of information than the treatment of common colds and grippe. First of all, a cold is a cold and requires a COLD remedy. A preparation that is good for half a dozen other things besides colds can't be as effective a cold remedy as a cold calls for.

Many popular remedies which the public takes for colds often only make relief more difficult because they are constipating and also make the system acid.

It is also well to remember that a cold is an internal infection and, as such, calls for internal treatment. Local, or outside applications only relieve temporarily, if at all. They can't reach the seat of the trouble and can't prevent the infection from spreading within the system.

Ask your doctor and he'll probably tell you that the closest thing to an ideal cold remedy he knows of is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. In fact, many doctors frankly admit that they couldn't write a better prescription for a cold if they wanted to. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is effective and reliable because it does the several things necessary to thoroughly kill a cold.

Acts Four Ways!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine opens the bowels, gently but thoroughly—the first step in knocking a cold. Second, it kills the cold germs in the system, drives out the poisonous infection and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the entire system, which is the final touch in banishing a cold and which also fortifies the system against further attack.

This is the treatment every cold requires and anything short of it is courting danger.

In dainty tablet form, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is convenient and pleasant to take, as well as effective. And it is absolutely safe for young and old. It contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. It does not upset the stomach, nauseate or make the head ring or swim. All over the world it is the standard cold tablet.

Beat the Cold to the Punch!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine comes in handy, pocket-size boxes, cellophane-wrapped, and is sold by every drug store in America. Keep it handy as the ounce of prevention that beats the pound of cure. At the first sign of cold or grippe take a few of the tablets and you usually knock the cold over night. Remember, no cold is too slight for immediate attention—and remember, there is no substitute for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

Matrimony Should Be More Than Just a Job

Do men mean it when they say they admire "an old-fashioned girl?"

Do they honestly prefer 'em demure and domestic, instead of free and flighty?

Dear Sally:

I wonder if I can ask a question in your column about something that is puzzling me. I'd like to have some of the men answer it, because it is their attitude that I can't make out.

I have heard any number of them say that the world would be so much better off if girls weren't so independent; if they went in for marriage and homemaking instead of business, or art, or journalism, or what have you. I have read tirades in various papers and magazines to the same effect.

PREFERS MARRIAGE

Then why is it, since they say they believe that way, that when they meet a girl who would rather marry and have a family, they seem to fight shy of her?

I have always frankly said that marriage was the career I would rather have than all the business success in the world. I do work now; but having a nice little home, a husband and a little family has always been the dream I have had. I have never dreamed of setting the world on fire as a business woman. That sort of life doesn't interest me. I'm just naturally domestic.

And from the way they talk, you would think that men would be falling over themselves to get a girl who felt that way. But are they?

Huh! They are not! They seem to be afraid of me, when they find out that's the way I feel! They act as if a girl who would rather marry than paint pictures or write advertising were actually trying to work some kind of "confidence game" to take advantage of them, rope them into supporting her, or something.

PUZZLED BY MEN

I don't get it. Honestly I don't. I can't understand it at all, in the face of the way they talk.

I'm not bad looking. I dress smartly. I can cook and sew, and in school I took a course in baby care and domestic science, under the impression that marriage was a job, and with the desire to do that job well if and when I got it.

I'm not dumb. I see almost all the good shows — on my own money, usually. I read a good deal. And I have a sense of humor—it's all that saves me, sometimes, from having the jitters.

I'm not hard to get along with. I have lots of friends. But the men seem to think I'm "on the make" for a meal ticket, and pass me up.

And all the while they're letting themselves be taken in beautifully by girls who actually are on the make—for expensive dinners, taxicabs, fur coats, orchids and a generally easy spot to light. And they marry these gold diggers (who usually can't boil water without burning it) and get stung for plenty of alimony before they're done with them.

What is the matter with men, anyway? Are they just plain dumb? Why do they run out on a girl who wants to go domestic, when they say that's the kind they want? CAROL.

My guess is, Carol, that they don't run out on the girls, but—they do run out on the prospect of marriage.

STUDY TECHNIQUE

Marriage has never been a natural habit for males. It's an acquired taste, like olives. And never has it been less popular than now, when a young fellow has all he can manage if he takes care of himself. So it takes plenty of fancy maneuvering to lure the modern man into what he considers a mighty tricky trap.

And these charmers you call gold diggers know the technique, Carol. They supply the two important things which you seem to omit from your program—flattery and fun.

They make a man believe that there's more to romance than a dull round of domestic chores; while I fear, honey, that you make matrimony seem—just a job. Which it is, of course. But it should also be a great deal more. It should be an adventure—the happiest adventure, the gayest gamble that two people can embark upon.

Also, these frivolous sisters aren't so ready for the picking. They understand and share the masculine hatred of domestic shackles. And, as a consequence, it gives the big boy a great thrill to think they couldn't say "No" to him. Which is usually the simple truth!

In short—they know their stuff, youngster. And with all respect for your noble qualities, I don't think it would hurt you to learn a few points from them.

Imagination Factor in Love Rifts, Asserts Fay King

By FAY KING

A young couple meet, fall in love and marry. In a short time they fall out of love and get a divorce.

No one could have kept them apart when they thought they were in love. And no one can keep them together when they think they do not love each other any more.

It seems to me it has been more a change of mind than a change of heart.

They thought themselves into love and marriage, and now they have thought themselves out of love into divorce.

In the beginning they exaggerated every good point into impossible perfection. Now they exaggerate every slight fault into an irreparable wrong.

Imagination has played an overpowering part in their estimation of each other.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Searching Party Is Joined by Ronald

Only when we all sprang up in hearty greeting and Helena flung herself into his arms with a choking cry of "My boy, my boy, Carolyn—" did the efficient operative summoned by Harry Underwood relax his vigilant look and slip unobtrusively out of the room to rejoin his comrade, Brock, in their patrol of the grounds.

"Have you any news of—them?" Roland asked, with a mighty and almost successful effort to keep his lips from trembling.

"What little we have we'll tell you right away." Dicky said smoothly, "but your mother is exhausted, and is just about to go over to the hotel for a little rest. Will you not wait until she is gone, and then follow her later?"

A queer, stubborn look flashed into the boyish face, but aloud he only said:

"Yes, yes, that will be best. I'll come over, Mums, as soon as I hear all about it. Of course, you know—"

"Oh, Ronald, they've been kidnaped!" Helena began hysterically, but Lillian took her tenderly but firmly away from Ronald's arms, and the two women, with Samuel Brixton close behind them, went out of the door to the waiting Brixton car.

RONALD HEARS STORY

Mrs. Barnes, who ushered them out, returned so quickly that I surmised she had delegated to Lucy the task of escorting the Brixtons to the door. She slipped quietly into her seat as she came in, for her husband and Dicky, who had made Ronald sit down, were once more relating the story of the disappearance of the girls.

Harry Underwood came back during the recital, evidently having seen the departure of the Brixton motor, and I saw his keen eyes searching the boy's face unobtrusively but thoroughly.

Only one thing was not told Ronald, and that was any reference to Charles Owen. By tacit agreement, both Dr. Barnes and Dicky omitted to mention our suspicions of Owen, or the arrival of the telegram from him. We were therefore all the more surprised when Ronald broke forth vehemently:

"Has anybody checked up on Charles Owen—that man who calls himself my half-uncle?"

No one spoke for an instant, then Harry Underwood asked quietly:

"Have you any reason for asking that, Ronald?"

For an answer the boy looked at Dr. and Mrs. Barnes and hesitated.

"We already have told Dr. and Mrs. Barnes of Mr. Owen's—attentions—to Marion," I said quickly. "It was necessary, of course, that they should know all the circumstances. But you may speak whatever is in your mind. They will understand as well as we."

STATES REASONS

"Then he's the man to watch," Ronald cried excitedly. "I don't care if he were my real uncle, he's mixed up in this some way, I'm sure."

"But why, Ronald, why?" Harry Underwood persisted. "Have you anything to go on?"

Ronald looked at him steadily.

"The way he kept looking at Marion after she turned him down—at the dance—" he looked at me, and I nodded my remembrance of that dramatic moment—"it was positively murderous when he thought no one was looking. And of course nobody bothering about him except me."

All his tortured boyish heart was in his voice, and I knew what was causing him the keenest suffering—that he had not become reconciled to Marion in the short hours following her rebuff to Owen, and her "return to her senses," as Mary had dubbed it. I know, better than almost anyone, that Ronald had been harsh and unforgiving in that leave-taking, and I knew that the remembrance was causing him even more poignant anguish than his sister's disappearance, great as that grief must be.

"And then—" again he hesitated. "I heard him say something queer to Dad. I didn't think anything about it at the time, but—you know Dad isn't my real father, but he's always been the same as one—oh, you don't think Dad is mixed up in this, do you? He couldn't be, with Carolyn and Mother!"

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Party Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I am having a few of my friends in on my birthday for an informal party. Would it be proper for me to write the invitations? If so, will you kindly send me an idea for wording the invitations?

2—Just how soon should invitations be sent before the date of the party? ALICE.

1—The first thing to decide is whether or not you wish to mention, in your invitation, the fact that the party is to be a birthday party. Some people think that it is nicer to just invite their friends, and after they arrive, have the fact that the party is a birthday celebration "just leak out."

Also it is far better form for the mother to write these invitations, since she is the hostess of the home.

Dear Mary:

It would make us very happy if you would come to a small party that I am giving for Grace on Friday, the tenth of December, at our home, at nine o'clock. Do say that you will come, for we want very much to have you with us.

Dearest love from us all,

Cordially,

2—The invitations should be mailed about two weeks, or at least ten days, before the date of the party.

Christmas Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a girl to send Christmas cards to young men she met during her summer vacation, but whom she hasn't seen since? I met quite a few very nice young men while vacationing this summer, and I am rather in doubt as to whether or not to send Christmas cards. BLONDIE.

Yes, this is a pleasant thing to do, and thoroughly correct.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Diet Knowledge Ended Old-Fashioned Scurvy

Everybody should have a hobby. One of my friends has an odd one—collecting old books about sailing vessels. In glancing over some of these, I was impressed by the many references to what used to be a dreaded disease, scurvy. It was most common in the days of long sea voyages. With a shortage of fresh vegetables and fruits, scurvy was sure to afflict the sailors.

Dr. Copeland

But today such a voyage can be taken without fear of scurvy. Modern methods of refrigeration and our present knowledge concerning vitamins and nutrition have done away with the danger of this disease.

Scurvy is called by the doctors a "deficiency disease." That is, there is something missing in the diet. It is the lack of vitamin C that results in the symptoms of this ailment.

Vitamin C is found in fresh fruits, especially the citrus fruits, such as oranges, lemons and grapefruit. It is also found in fresh vegetables, like lettuce, cabbage and tomatoes. Because these foods will prevent scurvy, they are called "anti-scorbutic" foods. It isn't necessary to take a lot of the given food. It has been shown that the juice of one orange or of one tomato, taken daily, will prevent scurvy in an adult.

But this vitamin aids in promoting health in other ways. It increases our resistance to infections.

When there is a lack of vitamin C, there probably will not be an acute attack of scurvy, as I have said, but the absence of "pep" is noted. Continued deficiency of vitamin C causes pains in the joints. These symptoms may be mistaken for rheumatism or arthritis.

In a severe case of scurvy, the skin assumes a peculiar pallor. The gums are swollen, and the teeth become sensitive and loose. There is mental and physical fatigue. The appetite is lacking. There is a general "run-down" condition.

Most of us are familiar with the value of fresh fruits and vegetables. Yet how many of us neglect to include these important food substances in the daily diet.

The citrus fruits are among the most valuable of the anti-scorbutics. They should be given to infants as well as to older children and adults. Strained orange juice may be given to an infant as early as the third month.

Scurvey is a preventable disease. Since certain foods protect you against this disease, include them in your daily diet.

If your children do not progress in school as they should, if they fail to cut good teeth and to possess the normal energy, you may suspect what we call "hidden scurvy." Correct the diet and all will be well.

Household Hints

Allow at least 20 inches from plate to plate when seating guests.

No household machinery will run well without an occasional greasing and oiling.

Hold the new pen in the flame of a match for a few seconds and burn off the oil finish that prevents the flow of ink. It will write well at once.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Only Way

A bridge player often is confronted with the situation that he must find a particular distribution of the cards in order to fulfill his contract. Perhaps the bidding has reached too great heights, due to a wealth of honor-tricks in one hand or the other, or possibly an Opening bid has been made, based on a bare minimum, which the Responding Hand finds it difficult to realize, because we are all professional optimists and find it very hard indeed ever to visualize the barest of minimums when partner has opened the bidding.

North—Dealer.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

It will be noted that North's Opening bid is an absolute minimum. It contains barely 2½ honor-tricks and the most barren of distributions. The maker of the bid later explained that he did not wish to give his East opponent the opportunity to open the bidding.

The Opening lead was a spade, which was won with the Ace in Dummy, and North took stock of his resources. His hand, of course, contained four tricks, but had only one entry—the Ace of hearts. As one of Shakespeare's characters offered his kingdom for a horse, this player would have been willing to give at least half a kingdom for a small diamond, so that he need not sacrifice the heart Ace so early in the game. However, being a believer in the principle of finding favorable distribution, if that is the only way the contract may be fulfilled, he made the best of a bad situation and led the Ace of diamonds from the Dummy. This was followed by a small heart, won with the Ace, and three more rounds of diamonds were laid down, all of the suit dropping.

Now North put into effect his gamble on the hope of finding things just so. A small club was led, and East played the 9. The King was played from Dummy and held the trick. A small club was returned, and North found that the age of miracles had not passed. East's Ace dropped, and the rest was easy. The Dummy was now good, as Dummy's spade Knave and two losing hearts had been discarded on North's good diamonds.

If you an guard against an unfavorable break in the play of the hand, you should always do so, but if you must find the most favorable distribution, then that should be played for.

TODAY'S QUESTION

After a Forcing bid, do you positively have to go game before the bidding stops? In other words, if the opponents do not bid a game after one of them has made a Forcing two-bid, what is the penalty?

Answer—There is no penalty, as this is not a point of law but a convention of bidding.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Even a trifle in ermine is beautiful. Far more effective than the longest, grandest wrap is a tiny jacket of snowy ermine done in a double-breasted design with a tailored, notched revers and wide balloon sleeves.

A grand gesture is possible by sweeping the luxurious folds of the new capes about one. Worth has introduced voluminous capes of dull velvet, utterly plain in cut and detail, with a severe neckline and fastened only with a jeweled ornament.

Gray clouds roll up over the horizon of fashion as that hue becomes a style highlight. A most charming sports outfit is in gray, the bodice being of jersey lace, while the skirt is of fine basket weave woolen. There is a belt of green and red beads.

The Symbol that Identifies

WASHING METHODS AND SANITATION CERTIFIED SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH COMMISSION OF PENNSYLVANIA LAUNDRY OWNERS

One of the firm convictions of PITTSBURGH'S CERTIFIED LAUNDRIES is, that wash day has no place in a well organized home. These Laundries are founded upon workmanship of which they are justly proud.

All Laundries are not certified, and since there is a difference between certified service and the ordinary kind, every package is labeled with the symbol of certification. The CERTIFIED LAUNDRIES do this so that you will know safe, correct methods were used, according to scientific laundry standards.

The privilege to use this symbol of certification is only granted to Laundries who agree to use certified, approved methods consistently, for the protection of all materials entrusted to their care.

This superior, uniform standard of work costs no more than others, yet, clothes not only look better but actually last longer.

If your package does not bear the CERTIFIED label, waste no time in calling ATlantic 1318 for a list of these better Laundries . . . . you'll be glad you did.

AUDITORS SHOW INSULL DEALS 'LOSS-PROOF'

By M. L. RAMSAY
Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Nearly $1,200,000 worth of stocks were carried for Insull officials and favored outsiders in "loss-proof" special investment accounts of the Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment Company.

This was revealed in a special report of auditors. Losses which the company stood, instead of the favored group, were one element in the deficit of $28,390,000 in Mississippi Company assets disclosed since the receivership.

Twenty-four numbered accounts were listed by auditors, who reported to the receiver the names which they said these numbers represented.

HOW PLAN WORKED

Securities were "bought" by the company from these persons with an agreement to sell them back later. Where any securities were sold back, it was at the same price the company had paid. Thus, if prices went up, the securities were claimed, opening the way to a profit by selling them elsewhere.

Mostly prices went down, so the company retained the securities and stood the losses.

Oliver E. McCormick, vice president and treasurer of Middle West Utilities Company, "sold" stock of his company to the Mississippi company through three of these accounts for a total of $118,500, according to the auditors.

Two of these deals were dated back on the books from December 15, 1931, when Middle West was selling under $7 a share, to August 15, 1931, when it sold above $17, tending to conceal the loss to the company on taking over the stocks.

OTHER PURCHASERS

Other purchases of securities by the company were reported from: G. W. Hamilton, $46,069; E. A. Davis, $22,550; James L. Martin, $30,500; F. E. Kreusi, $26,912 and G. E. Olmstead, $19,312.

A price of $46.75 a share, or more than twice the market price at the time, was paid for a block of Middle-West stock taken over from J. C. Kennedy, president of the subsidiary Central and South West Utilities Company, according to the auditors.

Argentine Votes Immigration Curb

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The Argentine government has restricted immigration into the country under a new law effective January 1, in an effort to curb unemployment.

Only immigrants with approved contracts for work or those called by families resident in Argentina will be permitted to enter after that date.

ASSOCIATION ELECTS NEW PRESIDENT

At a meeting of the Holgar J. Johnson Agency of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, announcement was made of the results of the recent election at which Albert F. Randolph was chosen president of the Agency Association. He was presented with the presidential cup which he holds for one year, until the next election.

Mr. Randolph's election was based on the voting of the entire agency organization of 120 men, and the basis upon which the candidate was elected was his usefulness to the organization, his success as a personal producer, and his general community standing.

During his three years in the life insurance business he has been a consistent producer; has been recognized by his company in that he has been a speaker before the national convention at White Sulphur Springs. Prior to his entrance into the life insurance business he was associated with the Electrical Research Products, Inc., of the Western Electric Company.

During the election contest, an abnormally large volume of new life insurance was produced. At the close of the election contest, the local agency of the Penn Mutual had brought its production for this year up to within 6 per cent of its 1931 record which was the largest year of production that the local agency has ever had.

In making the announcement of the election to the local office, Wallis Boileau, Jr., superintendent of agencies of the company, outlined the general optimistic attitude of the home office executives as a result of the upturn of the production of life insurance throughout the entire United States.

ALBERT F. RANDOLPH

Mr. Randolph, elected president of the Holgar J. Johnson Agency Association.

TRUSTS PAY BIG DIVIDENDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Holders of corporate trust shares and other investment trust sponsored by Administrative and Research Corporation have received a total of $27,051,622 on the regular distribution dates during the two years and four months ended November 1.

Important stockholdings together with number of shares held in Administrative and Research sponsored trusts as of November 1 were 25,280 Allied Chemical, 27,045 American Can, 34,688 American Telegraph and Telephone, 33,982 American Tobacco B, 25,280 Columbia Gas and Electric and 38,577 General Electric.

In commenting on this distribution record, Cedric H. Smith, vice-president, said:

"This demonstrates once again the advantages of sound diversification of investment funds in the stocks of leading corporations. During the worst period of the depression, when scores of unquestionably sound corporations have ceased paying dividends, the well diversified, ably managed and capably sponsored fixed investment trusts have gone right on paying their shareholders a satisfactory return on their money."

NEW TAX LAW DISCUSSED

Tax losses on municipal bonds are not subject to distinct limitations applicable to non-governmental obligations, say Gertler, Devlet & Co., specialists in municipal bonds, in an interpretation of the Revenue Act of 1932 for their clients. They say:

"The Revenue Act of 1932 definitely limits deduction from income incurred through sale or exchange of stocks and corporation and utility bonds. Security dealers and incorporated banks and trust companies are not subject to these distinct limitations. Their losses are deductible as per prior law.

"The Revenue Act of 1932 specifies that obligations of the United States government or political subdivisions thereof, are not subject to these limitations. Consequently, holders of municipal, state and government bonds may liquidate said holdings in order to register tax losses without any qualification. Moreover, the holder of obligations in this category may liquidate in order to effect tax losses and may concurrently repurchase obligations of a similar character.

"Bonds issued by Federal Land Banks and Joint Stock Land Banks have been held not to be government securities, and consequently, are subject to the new income tax law limitations regarding security losses."

Index of Clearings Shows Improvement

Bank clearings at 47 leading cities of the United States for the week ending November 23, totaled $4,110,447,000. This is 4.3 per cent less than the preceding week, and 9.7 per cent below the week ending November 26, 1931. Due to a shift in the reporting date, last year's total covers the Thanksgiving Day holiday, but this year's does not. Allowing for this difference, the decline from last year is 24.7 per cent. After similar adjustment, clearings outside New York City were 20.7 per cent less than last year, but only 30 per cent below a week ago.

On a seasonally adjusted basis, this is a favorable showing. The index compiled by Bradstreet's Weekly, rose from 37.3 to 43.9 per cent of the 1928-30 average. A year ago the index stood at 55.7.

Holiday Glass Trade Holds Good Volume

The American Glass Review, in its issue of November 26, said:

While demand for glass tableware and specialties for the holiday trade continues fair to good, the glass industry generally is anticipating a period of comparatively dullness as the end of the year approaches. There has been apparent the past few days a letup in the urgency of demand for many glass products. This is seasonal and spot demand always is slow after December 10 through the holiday period to January 15. The present season is unlikely to show much change.

CONTINENTAL OIL'S DEBT REDUCED

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—In three years and three months to the end of September this year, the Continental Oil Company, Delaware, has reduced its outstanding funded and long-term debt by $26,113,737. On July 1, 1929, when the property and assets of Continental Oil Company, of Maine, were transferred to Marland Oil Company, and the name of the latter changed to Continental Oil Company, Delaware, the total outstanding debt was $36,247,553. On September 30, last, it amounted to $10,133,816, and will show a further reduction at the end of the year.

INTEREST COST CUT

This policy of clearing away funded debt has drastically reduced interest charges against income. Whereas in 1929 interest and amortization of discount and expense on funded debt amounted to $1,886,146, equal to approximately 40 cents a share, the deduction for this purpose had been reduced to but $319,578 in the first nine months this year. Debt reduction has been accomplished steadily, entirely out of income and cash resources.

RATIO IMPROVED

The current ratio, moreover, is now relatively stronger than three years ago. At the end of last September, current assets of $32,882,999, including $7,978,083 cash, were 7.19 times the current liabilities of $4,571,150. On September 30, 1929, current assets of $60,619,428 and current liabilities of $10,474,389 represented a ratio of 5.8 to one.

TRADE STEADY IN WEST

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—For the first time in two and one-half years, business activity in the Far West shows a tendency toward stabilization, according to the first public release of the Bank of America index of Far Western business. The index number for October is 59.4 representing the relatively small three-point change from the index figure of 62 in May.

A tendency toward stabilization in the area is indicated by a comparison of this year's three-point fluctuation with last year's decline of 11.7 for the corresponding period from May to October and the decline of 48.1 points in the index record from October, 1929, to last May. From 70.5 in January last the number declined sharply to 62 in May. Since then the decline appears to have been fairly well checked with the monthly record as follows: June 61.1, July 62, August 59.1, September 61 and October 59.4.

STEEL EXPORTS SHOW GAIN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Exports of iron and steel products from the United States for the month of October amounted to 41,226 gross tons compared with 36,038 tons in September and 32,955 tons for August, according to a report of the Commerce Department's iron and steel division.

With 24 of 48 classes of products showing increased shipments to foreign markets, the export trade continued its upward climb.

Scrap continued in its role of leading item, gaining 4,009 tons to total 10,004 tons. Skelp, climbing 4,012 tons to a figure of 4,224 tons, was the month's second item, followed by galvanized steel sheets, which recorded a gain of 1,940 tons for the second consecutive month.

The month's fourth item in point of tonnage was tin plate, exports of which were 1,441 tons under the September total.

Sales Up

W. H. SLOAN

MEMORIAL PARK SALES GAIN

A marked up-trend in business is indicated by the sales records of the Allegheny County Memorial Park in the last six months, according to W. H. Sloan, advertising manager. He said:

"Since May, every month has shown an increase of from 40 to 60 per cent more business this year over last year. Inquiries brought in by our Sunday afternoon sacred songs broadcast, necessitated an increase of more than 50 men in our sales force on November 1. By the first of the year, we expect to add 50 more."

Allegheny County Memorial Park was founded in 1928. It exemplifies the idea that the cemetery should be a place of beauty, according to Sloan. He said:

"Cemeteries should not be places feared and shunned as in the past. We are doing in Pittsburgh what Sir Arnold Wilson, distinguished British sociologist, urged in an American Weekly article in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph on November 20. He urges the Christian world to change its cemeteries from terrifying and unsightly places, into pleasant parks, where children are unafraid in daytime, and nobody fears to walk at night. That is the ideal we have been striving for in Allegheny County Memorial Park for the past four years."

R.F.C. FINANCIAL LOANS LOWER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(INS.)—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation today reported to the clerk of the House of Representatives it authorized loans totaling $170,923,447 during October, and in addition, subscribed to $36,000,000 capital stock of Agricultural Credit Corporations.

The actual authorized loans show an increase of $30,000,000 over September, accounted for chiefly by an expansion of loans for relief purposes and self-liquidating projects.

Loans to banks, railroads and other financial institutions showed another decrease over the previous month. The October loans were $59,023,185, as compared with $64,217,500 last month.

An optimistic note was sounded in a showing that financial loans totaling $4,765,448 were withdrawn or canceled between October 1 and November 14.

FAIR PINS HOPE ON CURRENT QUARTER

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Extent of profit or loss of The Fair, a leading State street popular priced department store with two neighborhood branches, for the fiscal year ending January 31, next, depends almost entirely on results for the fourth quarter. The company has paid its preferred dividends this year in anticipation of a profitable final three months, when department stores normally get their best trade.

The Fair does not issue interim reports, but in common with other department stores this year, to date, it has had unprofitable business. High taxes, heavy overhead expenses, rents and low selling prices have combined to make profitable results for most of 1932 difficult.

PRICES STEADIER

Offsetting these unfavorable factors at the present time, however, are substantially increased price stability in major lines, well sustained unit volume and a generally better merchandising situation in Chicago. Price stability has developed gradually over the past summer as distress merchandise has decreased and both manufacturers and merchants have strengthened their quotations. This fall The Fair has increased its unit volume slightly above that for a year ago. Dollar sales, however, of Chicago department stores reporting to the Federal Reserve Bank are around 28 per cent less than a year ago.

VOLUME SUSTAINED

At current low prices, profit margins are small and in many instances negligible or absent. Sustained unit volume, combined with the usual mark-up of goods for the holiday trade, should develop profits to some extent.

For the year ended January 31, 1932, the Fair reported net profit of $200,142, after charges and federal taxes, equal to $5.22 a share on 38,333 shares of 7 per cent preferred stock. Preferred dividends paid last year were $270,499 and common dividends $542,910. Directors voted to omit the quarterly common dividend of 25 cents which was due February 1, 1932. In the preceding quarter, dividend of 25 cents a share was paid on the common, prior to which the stock was on a $2.40 annual basis.

CHAPIN HERALDS HIGHER PRICES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Favorable prospects for improvement of commodity prices were seen by Secretary Chapin at the beginning of the current fiscal year. The commerce secretary said in his annual report:

"Although commodity prices continued to fall sharply during the (last) fiscal year, on June 30 last the prospects for some change in the trend were brighter than at any time in several years.

"Surplus supplies in many branches of industry had been reduced, and a more active demand was being reflected in a stiffening of prices. Rises from May 30 to the end of June, 1932, in prices of meats and several other domestic farm products were sharp."

For the first time since 1929, Chapin said he also saw with the end of the old fiscal year "some signs of clearing in the foreign front to halt the decline."

CROPS PAY 100 COLLEGE FEES

BANNERS ELK, N. C.—(AP.)—A system of accepting farm produce from students for expenses at Lees-McRae College here has enabled 100 to remain in school this year.

Two boys brought enough sweet potatoes to supply the college for the entire winter.

At the beginning of the first semester the college took in on student account eight cows, one mule, 470 pounds of beef, 84 pounds of honey, and many bushels of grain.

Wyoming May Ease Laws on Marriage

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo.—County officials of Sweetwater Green River, Wyo., the county seat, are planning to request the next session of the state legislature to revise the five-day marriage law passed by the last session. Instead of discouraging hasty matrimony, they declare, the law has served to divert much of Wyomings matrimonial business into neighboring states.

Venango Hunter's Wound Brings Death

COOPERSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 28.—Venango County's first fatal hunting accident of the season claimed the life of Arthur Tingley, 31, of this place. He was hunting with Claire Reitz, 21, November 5, when Reitz, reloading his gun, accidentally fired the shot striking Tingley in the left foot. It was amputated but infection caused death.

BUSINESS

Displacement of Jobs By Machines Is Old Problem

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

THE DEVELOPMENT of machines and industrial efficiency is being blamed for most of the troubles of the present time. Many of us are looking upon labor saving devices as a horde of ogres, who have destroyed the means of livelihood of our 11,000,000 jobless. The general attitude appears to be that there is something new about the problem and that we would be better off if we returned to the days of the hand crafts.

There is nothing new about it at all. It has been going on for a century. There were periods of hardship and economic distress before the beginning of the machine period, called in our history books the industrial revolution, just as there have been since. No one can deny that the progress of machines has been responsible for many periods of maladjustment between jobs and men who wanted jobs. No one who seriously considers the problem can deny that the industrial revolution, even with its temporary hardships, has made life easier.

* * *

Length of Working Day Has Shortened

FEW OF US in the present generation have any conception of how hard our great-grandfathers and great-grandmothers had to work. We have forgotten that a 13 or 14-hour day was once taken as a matter of course for a laborer or a man who knew a trade. We have forgotten that our great-grandmothers spun, wove, made all the family clothes, baked their own bread, and that most of them died young as a result of the hardship.

The eight-hour day for the man and the relative leisure which a housewife now enjoys are the direct results of the industrial revolution—the products of the machine. Each step in industrial development from the spinning jenny and the power loom to the most modern steel mill has caused its individual hardships and suffering at the time of its discovery. But these discoveries have been followed, slowly and clumsily perhaps, by adjustments in working days and in wages which have lightened the tasks of humanity and increased the possibilities for enjoyment of life. The present day factory worker would consider life insufferable if he had to indure the discomforts of the daily life of Queen Elizabeth.

Technocracy Is New Name for Old Problem

IF YOU CAN visualize working fourteen hours in a day, walking home from work instead of riding in a street car or automobile, sitting down to a dinner with the limited diet which would be available without modern methods of transporting and preserving foods, having no radio or movies for your entertainment, having no telephone, no electric light, no gas range, trying to talk to your worn out wife who has had to do your washing by hand, bake her own bread, spin, weave and sew, then you may have some conception of the life of the average person before the machine came to "dog our existence."

During the war and post-war period we forgot about the problem of adjustment which must take place to reapportion work as machines save it. It was not until a minor industrial lull occurred in 1927 that economists began to talk about technological unemployment. Recently discussion of the problem has been revived as a result of a study made by a group of engineers. These men conceived the idea, which is far from novel, that the machine had conquered man. They merely coined a new name for a century old problem when they called it technocracy. They failed to see that we are in a period of temporary maladjustment which eventually will be solved by the five-hour day, the five-day week or a similar projection of the trend which has been under way for so many years.

* * *

Attitude Is Natural Result of Depression

THE IDEA THAT the unemployment problem has no solution seems to be a natural aftermath of business depressions. In commenting on this, Keneth C. Hogate, vice president and general manager of the Wall Street Journal, in a recent address said:

"The ease with which technological unemployment can be overstressed may be judged by the fact that in 1879, following the depression which ended in that year, there was appointed a committee to study this identical question. That committee reached the conclusion that the replacement of men by machines had been so great that never again could there be established in the United States anything approaching complete employment for all American labor."

"Considering the prosperity that we have enjoyed in the years since 1879, it would appear fully as hazardous now as then to forecast that we are here confronted with an insoluble problem. It is difficult now to realize that it was only during the administration of President Harding that the 12-hour day in the steel mills was abolished. We have made much progress toward the adoption of shorter working hours and it is reasonable to assume that this progress will continue."

LOWELL SEEN AS ENVOY

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, who recently resigned as president of Harvard University, will be suggested to President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt for appointment as Ambassador to England to succeed A. W. Mellon, according to the Boston Post.

The newspaper says also belief was expressed in political and collegiate circles that Dr. Lowell would accept the appointment if offered.

It is pointed out Dr. Lowell is regarded as one of the world's outstanding authorities on government and that for many years he made a careful study of the British system.

Recalling that the educator supported the late Woodrow Wilson and his views on the League of Nations, even to the point of engaging in public debate with the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, the Post says Dr. Lowell is regarded as politically independent, but had leaned toward the Democratic party in recent years.

DOWNTOWN GAS STATION HELD UP BY THREE BANDITS

RIAL DOUBTFUL OF RIGHTS IN P. S. C. QUIZ

Eaton May Attend Hearing on Bank Record Subpenas

State Senator W. S. Rial, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the Public Service Commission and public utilities, said today he was uncertain of his committee's right —already exercised—of subpenaing banking records of men against whom stands no accusation of wrong-doing.

The committee probably will be represented by its counsel, O. K. Eaton, of Pittsburgh, at the final hearing, Thursday, on an injunction sought by Public Service Commissioner S. Ray Shelby restraining the Second National Bank of Uniontown from delivering to the committee its records of Shelby's financial affairs, Rial said.

SHELBY FEARS HARM

A preliminary injunction was granted Shelby in Fayette County Court, Uniontown, Saturday. Shelby had maintained that baring of the records would irreparably damage him, would not prove pertinent to the investigation, would be illegal interference with his property rights as protected by state and national constitutions. He denied the committee had authority to subpena such records.

Questioned on Shelby's claims, Rial said:

"If I were serving in a judicial capacity, I should like to see the authorities on the question of subpenaing such records.

"It seems to me very much like asking a defendant to testify against himself. I am not sure of our right to subpena.

"Although I cannot speak for the committee, I think that we shall probably be represented at the hearing in Uniontown Thursday. We'll discuss that at our meeting in Harrisburg Wednesday."

EATON SILENT

Eaton told the Sun-Telegraph in a telephone conversation from Harrisburg he could not discuss Shelby's injunction until he consulted the committee and his legal aides and saw the petition.

One authority had it, however, that the subpena is one of the tools given by understanding to the legislature with which it is empowered to investigate the advisability of new legislation. Although the subpena is generally understood to be a legal weapon of such committees, this man said, judicial authorities might deny the committee's right.

Woman Fatally Stabbed, Pair Held

Police today held Mrs. Addly Loyal, 20, Negro, of 1304 Ridge avenue, in connection with the fatal stabbing of Lulu Mae West, 35, Negro, at Ridge avenue and Reedsdale street. Curly Williams, who police said lived at the West woman's home, was also held.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Nov. 28.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph.

Well, all I know is just what I read in the papers. Never miss my old friend, Mr. Brisbane, but I finally caught him on one. He wrote Saturday about Mr. Hearst's 15 thousand "Holstein" cattle. Now a Holstein is an old black and white spotted milk cow. She is a beverage animal entirely. She is raised for her juice, and not for her T bones. Why, even Mr. Hearst hasn't got enough editors to milk 15 thousand old "bossies."

Will Rogers

Course what he meant was 15 thousand "Herefords," white faces, faces made up like women.

Now here is what we got to do with this writing business, we got to have it divided according to talent. I'll handle the cattle end, he takes disarmament, unemployment, wars past and future, history, gone and coming, advantages of living in California and Florida, and, oh, yes, I'll take over discussion of the foreign debts, and give him ten per cent of all I collect.

But he is to have all the dissatisfied Republicans who blame the loss of the election on ignorance. Yours, WILL.

WELFARE PLEA BY MRS. HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover has invited every American woman to join in providing food, shelter and clothing for the needy.

Addressing them by radio from the White House yesterday, Mrs. Hoover asked "each and every one of us to consider ourselves volunteer associate members" of the national women's committee of welfare and relief mobilization of 1932.

Saying there is an "ample supply" of food and clothing, that all must give generously and that distributing facilities are adequate to reach everyone, the President's wife stated:

"To this purpose the mobilization of all the welfare and relief organizations in our country was established in the early autumn in order that they might all work together to the best advantage."

Prisoner Suspected In Joliet Jailbreak

Harry Layton, Negro, captured here in connection with a recent holdup, today was believed to be one of the ringleaders of a delivery from Joliet (Ill.) Penitentiary.

Layton and two other Negroes were arrested in Clairton by county detectives. He could not explain his possession of a revolver believed taken from a Joliet guard.

New U. S. Prison Chaplain Appointed

YORK, Pa., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The Rev. Joseph J. Schweich, assistant rector of St. Mary's Catholic Church, has been appointed chaplain at the new federal penitentiary at Lewisburg.

AWAIT EMPLOYE DONATIONS TO FUND

Welfare Workers Now Pin Hopes On Small Givers

The employe division of the Welfare Fund campaign organization was looked to today for an encouraging report of donations to the fund's $2,500,000 1933 budget.

With a quota of $400,000 for the division, 60 per cent of the 382 establishments to be canvassed have not yet been reported. A large part of these were expected to have their contributions listed at the noon report luncheon today.

HOPES IN SMALL GIFTS

Thursday noon, the division had but $43,000 to its credit; Friday it reported an additional $97,000.

Only 25 per cent of pledges secured so far are in the brackets under $100. Hope of the campaign leaders today was for thousands of small subscriptions to swell the total.

THESE FIRMS IN LINE

Organizations reported today whose employes all have donated to the campaign included:

Western Savings & Deposit Bank, Friend & Company, Vacuum Oil Company, National Valve & Manufacturing Company, Hotel Henry, Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Company, John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, International Business Machine Corporation, Uniondale Cemetery, Federal Enamel & Stamping Company of McKees Rocks, National Casket Company, Mellon National Bank, Western Electric Company, W. N. Sauer Company, DuPont Company, Dilworth-Porter Division of the Republic Steel Company and Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt Company.

Benito and Ed Could Win War And Collect Debt

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Two strong men stood badge to badge when Commissioner of Police Mulrooney, of New York, met Premier Mussolini.

We don't know who the boys talked about. But we hope it wasn't us.

The conference between Mulrooney and Mussolini has some international significance. Suppose those two boys sign a treaty? Benito could use Ed's 20,000 husky policemen in case of a tie.

The New York cops are the finest army of men in the world, and would make a great ally. And the boys like to fight so much they bring their own lunch.

That's something else for the Geneva diplomats to worry about. Mussolini and Mulrooney would not only win a war, but they'd collect the debts.

Building Toys for the City's Needy Children

JOHN HARLEY

Mr. Ehmann in the basement workshop of his Dormont home, where during the year he has turned out more than 1,000 toys for distribution at Christmas time by the Toy Mission. Mr. Harley, 1418 Fallowfield avenue, helped. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

R. H. EHMANN

MISSION ASKS EARLY GIFTS

Even on this Christmas eve, children, hanging their stockings by hearths long darkened by depression, may do so with their old hope—that St. Nicholas soon will be there.

For the Pittsburgh Toy Mission will aid that beloved saint—sorely injured in the crash—to the extent, it's hoped, of supplying toys to 20,000 children in the city.

Working through the schools, missionary societies and private organizations, and with the cooperation of the Boy Scouts and many stores, George L. Bond, who organized the Toy Mission 39 years ago, has set up headquarters at 100 Wood street.

Having labored with a small group of devoted helpers all year, repairing old and making new toys, Bond now asks that contributors act as quickly as possible to avoid difficulties of distribution.

More than 1,000 wooden carts, 130 dozens of dolls, and a most varied assortment of toys, discarded by more fortunate children, are already in possession of the Mission. The small mending staff is continually busy, so no child shall receive a plaything that doesn't work.

The generosity of the Toy Mission helpers is offering Pittsburgh a chance to play Santa Claus to its needy boys and girls.

WILD CARGO

By FRANK BUCK

With EDWARD ANTHONY

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Then there are the hillmen of the United Provinces, Northern Assam and Sikkim, who made a living by providing the world with its best songbirds—the shama thrush (finest of all songsters), the racquet-tailed dorango (greatest of all mimics, beside which our American mockingbird is a mere novice at imitating other birds), the golden-fronted green bulbul, the red-sided hill-tit, the white-headed laughing thrush, the blue whistling thrush and other accomplished whistlers and singers. I have dealt for years with these people. Their business is comparable to that of the Germans of the Hartz Mountains who supply the world with so big a percentage of its fine canaries, only, instead of being bred domestically as canaries are, the Himalayan birds are taken as fledglings from the wild birds' nests and reared by hand.

On account of the nature of my business, whenever I speak of a thrill my friends at once visualize a hand-to-hand encounter with a ferocious animal. Let me go on record, then, as saying that I know of no greater thrill than coming down the mountains through the gorgeous tea gardens of the Himalayan foothills—on the way to Siligouri, where one connects for Calcutta—with a caravan of a thousand birds, many of them whistling and singing.

EXPERT CHEATERS

The picture of the boys bearing on their carrying poles this lovely cargo—a sort of feathered pipe-organ that fills the air with music—is an unforgettable one.

Usually, however, all the poetry is knocked out of me when I reach Siligouri. There, on loading my birds on the cars, I invariably discover that I have fewer specimens than I paid for. No matter how carefully you watch these hillmen you're in for a short count. They know more about making birds disappear than Fred Keating, the magician.

Another picturesque means to a livelihood is that of the tribes that live in the section of the Himalayas where India and Tibet meet. Once a year these mountaineers come down to Calcutta with the most beautiful pheasants known to man—the Impeyan, the tragopan, the blood pheasant and other dazzling varieties that zoos and fanciers everywhere are anxious to secure.

A picturesque lot, these Tibetan hillmen. Enormous, wild-looking fellows, with long matted hair. Dressed in their heavy felt robes of hammered wool, they look strangely out of place. Even the phlegmatic Hindus follow them around and gaze at them in awe, wondering, perhaps, how much damage these giants could do with the big knives they carry.

COMMAND RESPECT

There is one group of these strange people that always try to locate me when they arrive in Calcutta with their annual harvest of pheasants. Failing to find me, they try to reach Lal.

Early one fall this particular crew descended upon the town with one of the most wonderful assortments ever seen anywhere. I was off in the interior at the time, having left Lal in charge of a collection of animals, birds and reptiles I had assembled for shipment to the United States. Needing a few more small animals, I had gone off to get them, announcing that I would try to be back in a week or 10 days.

The Tibetans, deciding that the information Lal gave them about my return was too indefinite, sold their birds to a local Hindu trader. Later in the day they made up their minds that they had been cheated. Whereupon they advanced in a body on the dealer, and throwing on the ground before him the money he had paid them, collected their cages one by one and walked off with the whole lot without saying a word. Not a blow was struck, not a knife drawn. Those huge mountaineers command respect.

Then they sought out Lal again and announced they had decided to await my return. They stored their birds in an abandoned house on the outskirts of the city, putting two members of their party in charge. The others went back to Calcutta and waited for me in front of the Grand Hotel un-

BOY, 4, STRUCK BY AUTO, DIES

Frank Michaels, 4, of 184 East Stanton court, died yesterday in St Francis Hospital from a skull fracture suffered when he was struck near his home by an automobile. Police reported to the coroner that the auto was driven by Miss M. Dublin, 5438 Butler street.

Several firemen escaped injury yesterday when a truck of Engine Company No. 29 crashed into a pole and a parked automobile at Homewood and Frankstown avenues. The driver, Andrew Mohr, said he swerved into the pole to avoid collision with an automobile.

Ironworkers Give Stalin New Title

KAMENSKOE, U. S. S. R., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Comrade Joseph Stalin, Communist party chieftain and Soviet Russia's most powerful figure, now has a new title—"honorable furnace worker of the most advanced blast furnace of the Soviet Union."

This honor was conferred on him by the crew of Furnace No. 7 of the Djerzinsky Metallurgical factory here after a union-wide contest in which the furnace was declared to be the most efficiently operated in the country.

B. & O. Tower Fire Loss is $75,000

SOMERSET, Pa., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Officials of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad today estimated at $75,000 the loss in destruction of a switching tower by fire late last night. The flames gained rapid headway as firemen stood helpless for a time, waiting until arrangements could be made with the power house at Connellsville to turn off the electric current and take over operation of the tracks controlled by the tower.

Family Sells Out, Receipts Go to Poor

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The family of Mrs. Theresa Kowalski, consisting of two sons and three daughters, is selling all its possessions and turning the receipts over to the poor. The sons, ordained yesterday, started for Seattle by automobile today, preaching en route. Later they will be joined at Seattle by Mrs Kowalski and her three daughters. All then will sail for China to do missionary work.

Ex-School Visitors Urge Restoration

Seeking to restore school visitors, a one-time elective office, a meeting of former school visitors will be held tomorrow evening in the new county building. Mrs. Allena G. Stuhlfire will preside.

BURGLARS LOOT THREE HOMES IN CITY

Priest's Coat Stolen During Services In Church

Police today were searching for three men who held up and robbed the attendant of the A. D. Miller Sons service station at Penn avenue and Barbeau street, downtown, last night.

According to witnesses the bandits parked their car on Barbeau street, two of them entered the station, forced the attendant, Herbert Lenger, 25, of 474 Edith street, into a wash room and looted the cash register of nearly $50. Joe Pfeil, of 210 Twenty-first street, who drove his truck into the station just as the bandits were leaving, was not accosted. He gave police a description of the men and car.

Although this is the first time Lenger has been held up, the station has been robbed four times previously in the last four years.

Buckley May Avoid Kissing King's Hand

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—It was generally believed in government circles today that Donal Buckley, the new Governor General of the Irish Free State, would not adhere to the ancient custom of going to London to kiss the King's hand in acknowledgment of his appointment.

The commission for his appointment was expected to be sent to Dublin by mail. This would be the first time in the parliamentary history of Great Britain, it was believed, that such procedure would be followed.

Hunter and Son Frozen To Death; One Survives

CAMBRIDGE, Md., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Lost in the marsh country of the eastern shore where they had gone hunting, a boy and his father were frozen to death. Their bodies were found early yesterday.

Another of MacKnight's sons, Samuel, 15, in serious condition at a hospital here from exposure, is expected to live.

The three MacKnights and a companion started hunting Saturday in the Drawbridge, Md., section. The companion became cold and returned to a nearby town to get warm. When the MacKnights failed to return the fourth man solicited aid and began a search. Samuel and his dead father and brother were found about daybreak.

WOMAN VIEWS PHOTO OF BODY CALLED HERS

CHICAGO, Nov. 28—(A.P.)—Mrs. Ida McCutcheon, 45, of New Kensington, Pa., at the suburban Homewood station of the highway police, has viewed a photograph of the woman whose body was identified as hers, and declared, police said, she had never seen her.

Mrs. McCutcheon told police she had left her home several days ago. She was found by Gary policemen on a business street in that city and taken to the Homewood Station. Later at the Salvation Army headquarters in Chicago Heights, John Miller in charge, who had identified the body of the woman, apparently slain and thrown from an automobile, as that of Mrs. McCutcheon, recognized the New Kensington woman. He said:

"There is no question but that this is the Mrs. McCutcheon who stayed with us, but I was positive the body I looked at was hers."

The mixup in identification arose when Hammond (Ind.), police said the body of a Mrs. Ida McCutcheon was found in a box car there in 1924. The police statement followed identification by Miller of the body of the recently slain woman as that of Mrs. McCutcheon.

Mrs. McCutcheon denied knowing Mrs. Lottie Davis whom reports to authorities had indicated was her daughter. A friend of Mrs. Davis, who is also from Pennsylvania, had asserted the body of the slain woman was not that of Mrs. Davis, when a conjecture arose that she might have been the victim of the slaying.

Authorities resumed efforts to ascertain the identity of the slain woman.

$130,000 GEMS, BONDS STOLEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(Universal.)—Theft of a fortune in jewels and stocks and bonds from the parked car of Mrs. Sarah Steward, wife of a New England banker, had been revealed today, after being kept secret nearly a week.

It was learned the gems, valued at $30,000 to $50,000, and the stocks and bonds, whose original value was said to be above $100,000, were taken from an automobile last Tuesday night.

Mrs. Steward discovered the loss after she had left her convertible coupe parked in Forty-seventh street, between Lexington and Park avenues, about 7 p. m.

When she returned she found a door handle had been broken off. A small handbag containing the valuables was missing. A slit in the canvas top of the automobile indicated the thieves had first tried to extract the bag by that method.

Police said none of the valuables was insured.

LIKENS REVOLT PROBLEMS TO AMERICA'S

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Leon Trotzky, exiled Soviet leader, made his first broadcast to America yesterday, speaking from Copenhagen, Denmark, over a coast-to-coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting System in a program arranged by the Hearst Radio Service in conjunction with Columbia.

His talk was relayed from Copenhagen to London by telephone, broadcast to America by short-wave radio and rebroadcast from New York to Europe.

This was also the deposed Russian war lord's first public utterance since his banishment to Turkey four years ago.

MEANING OF REVOLT

Talking in English with a strong Russian accent, Trotzky spoke on "The Meaning of the Russian Revolution." He said, in part:

"What question does the Russian revolution raise in the mind of a thinking man? Why did this revolution take place? Has it stood the test?

"The fact that the proletariat reached power for the first time in such a backward country as Russia seems mysterious only at first glance. In reality, it is wholly in accord with its historical background. It could have been predicted, and it was predicted. Still more on the basis of that prediction, the revolutionists built up the strategy long before the deciding event.

"The question now comes up—what was achieved at the high cost of the revolution? Many critics take malicious joy over the fact that the land of the Soviet bears but little semblance to a realm of general well being. Fifteen years! How much is that in the life of man?

EXAMPLE OF U. S.

"In the course of the Civil War in the United States, 50,000 men were killed. Can't those sacrifices be justified from the standpoint of the American people?

"Out of the Civil War came the present United States with its unbounded practical initiative, its technology and its economic system. The deepest, the most objective and most indisputable criterion of social progress is the growth of the productivity of social labor.

"The Russian masses of today, with their own hands are creating a better future. They want to create it at any cost. But let any enemy attempt to impose its will from the outside on the impatient masses and you will see whether they are passive or not.

"I am sure that the great American people have the highest interest, moral as well as material, and are in sympathy with the effort of the great Russian people to reorganize their social life on a higher level."

Wolf pleaded vainly with firemen to permit him to enter the building and save a shoe box containing $362, the week-end receipts.

Those rescued lived in an adjoining building at 1705 Center ...nue. In addition to Bernard ...is parents, they were Ber... 15; Sarah, 8, and Herman, 12, and Alex Adanik, his wife, Helen, and two children, Frances 5, and Peter, 3.

BUILDINGS BURN AT COVERDALE

Two buildings were destroyed and a third slightly damaged by fire following an explosion, in Coverdale's business district early this morning. Fire Chief Paul Eisaman, Bethel Township, estimated the loss at $6,000.

The blast was in a one-story concrete building, occupied by a barber shop, poolroom and bowling alleys, all owned and operated by Carmelo Burzio. He and his family, who lived in an apartment back of the barber shop, are away at a relative's funeral.

RUPP APPROVES DAVIS CONTEST

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—S. Davis Wilson, chairman of the Roosevelt Independent State Committee, said today Lawrence H. Rupp, of Allentown, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, has definitely decided to contest seating of Senator James J. Davis.

Wilson said the decision was reached when he and Rupp conferred here last night. Wilson will prepare a petititon for submission to the Senate asking that Davis be ejected and that Rupp be seated in his place. He added:

"The petition will charge wholesale irregularities and fraud. It will assert that a change of 85,000 votes in the state would bring about the election of Mr. Rupp instead of the Republican candidate, and it will show that 70,000 assisted votes were cast in Philadelphia alone."

Rupp ran approximately 160,000 votes behind Davis in the official count.

WILD CARGO

ODD FLY-SWISHER

I never ceased appreciating their willingness to wait for me, for it was a really fine assortment of pheasants that I picked up from those patient Tibetans.

No more curious aid to a living is to be found on the whole Asiatic continent than that of the Boutanese and high-country Tibetans, who dwell in the highest habitable reaches of the Himalayas. Most of their problems are solved by the yak, which in great herds roams the plateaus of these mountain fastnesses—and practically keeps these people alive.

This queer, heavy bovine serves as their beast of burden, it provides them with their beef, its skin becomes their leather, its hair is used to make the cloth of which their garments are fashioned, and its great fluffy tail—exported on a big scale—provides them with considerable revenue.

The yak-tail is used principally to make fly-swishers. Flies have a habit of congregating in great numbers wherever food is served in India, a contingency which is met in the upper strata of Hindu society with a yak-tail fly-swisher.

It is not an unusual sight in India to see a Hindu aristocrat serenely eating a curry while a boy stands in back of him discouraging ambitious flies with a gentle swish of a pink, green, blue or purple yak-tail—a dyed version of the original. There is no swatting. All that is asked of the flies is that they go chase themselves.

AMUSING EXPERIENCE

Inevitably this discussion of yak-tails reminds me of something that took place in the lounge of the Grand Hotel in Calcutta some years ago. I had been cornered by a chap who was in an advanced state of tipsiness. Having learned that I had just come in from Nepal with a pair of rhinos, he proceeded to tell me that he wished people would stop collecting such ugly brutes. How could anyone look at a rhino without shuddering? Why didn't I devote myself to catching something worth looking at like a green yak?

He went on to tell me that this was the most beautiful animal in the world. It had a lovely green tail and green skin and eyes to match. If I didn't believe him he'd be glad to show me the tail of one of these handsome emerald creatures that he had himself shot.

I assured him that I needed no proofs—that if he said there was a green yak there was a green yak.

"Don't cont'adict me!" he cried. "I can prove it!"

"I'm sure you can!" I agreed.

"I can't, eh?" continued the contrary cuss. "Just wait and see!"

My unsteady acquaintance walked off and I thought this would be the end of the discussion. My guess was wrong. He returned shortly afterwards with a green yak-tail swisher he had bought at the Bow Bazaar.

"When I say there's a green yak," he yelled, tossing the swisher at my feet, "I don't want any arguments, see?" With which he tottered off.

BIRDS DYED

The subject of dyeing reminds me of one means of living off jungle produce practiced by certain natives that is not quite as honest as the others I've mentioned. This is what might be called the spice finch racket, which at times is a fairly profitable game in Calcutta and other cities of India.

The spice finch is a plain little brown bird somewhat smaller in size than our American sparrow. Enterprising natives dye them all colors of the rainbow and sell them to gullible tourists as rare specimens.

They still tell the story of the English school teacher—one of those amateur bird authorities—who got a London newspaper to run a letter she sent announcing the discovery, in Calcutta, of a new species of bird. She called it the mottled something or other. (I don't quite remember.) At any rate, she was accurate in her selection of adjective. For if there is anything more mottled looking than a dyed spice finch that has begun to molt, I'd like to know what it is.

PITT EASTERN CHAMPION

SPORT COMMENT

RECORD OF PITT BIGGER THAN TITLES

THEY MAY BE passed up when the Rose Bowl invitation is sent out. They may be ignored by the men who take it upon themselves to award the Eastern championship. They may be denied other mythical honors. But when the Pitt Panthers completed the hardest schedule in the country undefeated, closing with a victory over Stanford that was far more decisive than the score of 7 to 0 indicated, they sold themselves to unbiased football men as a team worthy of being ranked on a level with any in the nation.

Warren Heller

The Blue and Gold, through the campaign, had such individual standouts as Warren Heller, the perfect football player; fine ends like Joe Skladany and Ted Dailey, and a brilliant kicker like Bob Hogan, but only a team that was great as a whole, including the reserves, and that was superbly coached, could have come through that murderous schedule unbeaten. No other eleven faced a schedule that was so tough or so representative of the country's breadth—from Army and Penn in the East, through Notre Dame, Ohio State and Nebraska on out to Stanford on the coast—and it is extremely doubtful if any other could have done as well. That schedule and the record they made through it, will stand as a bigger monument to the greatness of the 1932 Panthers and Coach Sutherland than would all the mythical titles in the world.

ALWAYS IT WAS clear that Notre Dame had the power and the speed and needed only the spark. It found the spark in being made the underdogs against Army, just as the Cadets did against Pitt, and Pitt did against the Irish.

The awakening that resulted in Army's worst defeat at Notre Dame's hands since 1921 has changed the complexion of the Southern California game in Los Angeles on December 10. An Irish victory will not be surprising if Saturday's gait is maintained.

JUST HOW MUCH it means to a boy in football to be given a public pat on the back by his coach, particularly when he has been going poorly, may be judged from an experience related by one of the leading mentors. This man, in his playing days, was a great back, famous for his open-field running.

In a certain big game on a muddy field where he was helpless, he looked very bad, and nobody thought to give him a word of cheer after his sorry performance. "I felt it for 10 years," he says. And as a result, this coach never fails to pep up a boy with some open sign of approval after the player has had a bad day.

THOUGH NOTRE DAME no longer goes South for games, the Irish must have made a deep impression with the kind of football they played in the old days, when Knute Rockne used to take them down there to play Georgia Tech.

For today, in the Southern Conference, no fewer than six of the more prominent teams are coached by men who learned their football under Rockne. They are Frank Thomas at Alabama, Chet Wynne at Alabama Poly or Auburn, Harry Mehre at Georgia, Chuck Collins at North Carolina, Clipper Smith at North Carolina State, and Charley Bachman at Florida.

Jim C...

EVERY TIME A football coaching job is open, or is about to become vacant, among the first men named as likely to get the place is Jim Crowley, one of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen, who has made an excellent record as mentor at Michigan State.

Crowley has been mentioned as a coaching possibility at Notre Dame, and now that it appears to be definitely settled Maj. Frank Cavanaugh is to leave Fordham the former Notre Dame star is said to be first in line for the Ram post if he cares to accept it.

IN FACT, CROWLEY is reported to have conferred with Fordham authorities when his Michigan State team played in New York more than a month ago, but no definite decision has been reached. It may be that Crowley is waiting for some official information as to what is going to be done at Notre Dame.

Cavanaugh has been Fordham's coach, and a successful one, for six years. Neither side will discuss the reasons for the university's reported decision not to renew his contract. If Crowley does not take the place it may go to Hiker Joy. Cavanaugh's assistant, who also has a chance to go to Holy Cross, his alma mater.

THE FAILURE OF Red Cagle and others to get away with more than a few of the forward passes they attempt in the pro league is attributed by Benny Friedman to the fact that they tip off their plays. "The passer gets the ball and what does he do?" asks Friedman. "Why he looks right down the alley, or out on the right, wherever he's going to throw. So it's easy for the defense to cover. I sweep the whole field with one glance, spot my man, and then look in another direction until I'm ready to peg. The old poker face stuff. And it works. You have to be careful not to lose your man when you look away. That was hard at first."

AMONG THE EARLY baseball announcements expected is one from President Bob Quinn as to just what he plans to do in connection with the Red Sox managership for next year. So far he has given no intimation as to whether he is going to retain Marty McManus or appoint a new pilot.

In the possibility that McManus may be replaced, friends of Walter Johnson see a last chance for the former Washington skipper to remain in the major leagues. Clark Griffith's efforts to have Johnson appointed president of the Atlanta Southern Association club have not been successful, and if McManus is not retained the appointment of Walter to the Boston post will be urged.

THE UNCERTAINTY AS to the outcome of the operation on Charley Gelbert's leg has the management of the Cardinals on the anxious seat. The infield plans of the St. Louis club will be completely upset if the star shortstop is unable to play next year.

Pete Bostwick

Though they have a raft of ball players at their disposal, the Redbird bosses admit that none of them could be depended on to fill Gelbert's shoes, and as a protective measure they may try to make a deal for an experienced National League shortfielder at the coming annual meeting.

WHEN THE AMERICAN race horse Mate invades England to run in important events there next year he will be under complete family supervision, as it is expected that the owner, A. C. Bostwick, will train the colt himself, as he did this year, and will take his brother, George H. (Pete) Bostwick, along to ride him. Having recovered from the effects of a weak kidney, which caused him to lose 14 straight races this year Mate is believed to have a good chance to pull down some of the leading English stakes in three racing seasons in this country, the Bostwick colt won $283,590. He started in 43 events, won 16 times, including the Preakness in 1931, was second eight times and third 13 times. If right, he will make his final American start at Bowie tomorrow.

WALTER HAGEN AND ARMOUR NEAR TOP

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Roland Hancock, of Stoneham, Mass., was low man with a 71-75—146 among early 36-hole finishers in the $10,000 72-hole Miami Biltmore Open golf tournament here today.

Hancock, with about one-third of the field in, led Tommy Armour, Boca Raton, Fla., with 73-74—147. Walter Hagen, Detroit, with 75-72, and Ed Dudley, Wilmington, Del., with 77 and a sub-par 70, who offered 147's for their second day play.

Gene Sarazen, defending the crown he won in the Miami Biltmore Open in March of this year, had to be content with a 150 for 36 holes, taking a 37-36—73 today to couple with his 77 of Sunday.

TROJANS, IRISH RANK HIGH

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Southern California's Men of Troy today held the key to the annual puzzle: Which is the country's greatest football team?

Notre Dame's whirlwind performance against the Army last Saturday deserves to increase immeasurably the importance of the clash of Rambler and Trojan at Los Angeles December 10. Should Southern California win that struggle and then emerge the victor in the annual Rose Bowl game at Pasadena January 2, there would be small need to look further for a generally acceptable national champion.

The Rose Bowl invitation is considered almost certain to go either to Colgate's unscored on Red Raiders or to Pitt's Panthers, rated the two best football machines in the East.

This schedule would leave out of consideration such high-powered outfits as Michigan and Auburn, but the chances are there would be a vast majority to accept the December 10 and January 2 tests as conclusive.

But before then, a half dozen major contests will have to be disposed of, including the Army-Navy, South Carolina-Auburn and Alabama-St. Mary's games this Saturday, the Oregon-Louisiana State and Florida-University of California at Los Angeles duels December 17, and the clash of Georgia Tech and California at Berkeley December 24.

Penn, D. & E. Stars Accept Game Bids

BALTIMORE, Nov. 28.—(INS.)—Four more college gridiron stars were selected today to participate in the North-South all-star football game for charity here December 10.

Those accepting invitations today were Howard Colehower, star tackle of the University of Pennsylvania and his team mate Frank Yablonski, who plays at a guard post. Both will perform for the Northern team, under the direction of Jock Sutherland, of Pitt.

Lester Corzone, Davis-Elkins fullback, and Al Woods, Maryland halfback, were added to the Southern squad, which will be coached by Dick Harlow, football mentor of Western Maryland.

Battles' Run Wins For Boston Pros

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—A 15-yard touchdown jaunt by Gyp Battles in the closing minutes of play gave the Boston Braves an 8-to-6 National Professional League victory over the Chicago Cardinals yesterday.

HORSES TO BE SOLD

WINCHESTER, Va., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The Satrap, and other well-known breeding horses owned by William du Pont, Jr., wealthy Wilmington (Del.) sportsman, will go on the auction block December 3. The announcement here today said the dispersal sale will be held at his Walnut Hall estate, near Boyce, in Clarke County.

KINGSLEY AT RANKIN

The West Penn League will open its basketball season tonight when Kingsley House clashes with Rankin Christian Center at Rankin.

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: A HUMAN SLATE—The Human Slate, whom I illustrated in my cartoon, is a subject of demography (skinwriting) which is made possible by a cutaneous affection causing the skin to be sensitive to tracings with a blunt instrument. This sensitiveness is due to the excitement of the tiny nerves which control the capillary supply of blood to the skin. The durability of the skinwriting varies with each individual. Usually the impression does not begin to appear until about 10 minutes after it was made. And it lasts from 30 to 90 minutes.

TOMORROW: HAIR IS HARDER THAN STEEL.

KERR, HANLEY PICK SQUAD

Andy Kerr, of Colgate, and Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, co-coaches of the all-Eastern eleven which annually faces a team of Western stars in the Shriner's benefit game in San Francisco, went into a huddle here over the week-end and selected the lads they'll invite to represent the East in this year's game.

Nothing official was announced as to the makeup of the squad, and nothing will be, either, until the bids are out and the boys either accept or reject the invitations, but following are a few players who'll be asked:

Warren Heller, Ted Dailey, Pitt, and Joe Tormey, of Pitt; Bill Sample, Carnegie Tech; Moss and Horstman, Purdue; Newman, Michigan; Melinkovich, Notre Dame; Kabat, Wisconsin; an end from Fordham; Pug Rentner, of Northwestern, and possibly Jack Criskard, of Harvard, along with one or two of Kerr's lads at Colgate.

Of course, if either Colgate or Pitt gets the Rose Bowl bid, it will mean a shift in plans. In the event Pitt goes, George Kavel, of Tech, may be invited.

Kerr will leave town today to attend the annual football dinner at Huntingdon, Pa., and then go to New York to make a series of speeches. He purchased a nice new outfit of dinner clothes for the tour.

Kerr, in contrast to the rap handed it by Pop Warner, gave the new "dead ball" rule a boost. He's for it, because he believes it will save many injuries.

Among others NOT in favor of the rule is Mister Izzy Weinstock, Pitt's fullback, who would have had a 55-yard, near-touchdown run against Stanford here Saturday if they'd introduced the rule and then thrown it into the ash can.—JESS CARVER.

SPORT VIGNETTES

He grows more distinguished looking with each passing year . . . He makes a better, terser, more meaningful, speech each time he appears in public . . . He refers to Pop Warner as "Pap" Warner, falling into a colloquialism that is peculiar to the community . . . I asked Pop himself about this latter habit following the banquet in their honor at the Schenley Hotel last Friday night, as we were riding downtown together with Dr. Bill McClelland for Pop's national radio broadcast, and the Old Fox replied, "He always called me Pap."

The gentleman sitting for his portrait on this wheezy old typewriter today is Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland, football coach of the University of Pittsburgh, who has just finished his ninth season as mentor of the Panthers, his greatest campaign in all respects . . . He has led his team undefeated through the toughest schedule ever attempted by a Pitt team, concluding it last Saturday with a 7-0 victory over Warner's Stanford eleven at the Stadium, Pop's first defeat on an Eastern trip since he took charge of the California university's gridiron fortunes almost a decade ago . . . Included in that sweep of 10 games are victories over the Army and Notre Dame and Pennsylvania and Carnegie Tech . . . There are two scoreless ties, against Ohio State and Nebraska, both powerful elevens, and, in the Ohio State game, the locals were only inches from a winning touchdown.

Perhaps the very ruggedness of the schedule accounts for the fact that during this most dramatic and colorful of seasons the Pitt defense outshone its offense, a striking state of affairs when it is considered that Pitt teams always have prided themselves upon their attacking power . . . It is one thing to throw all caution to the winds and go out and gamble on outscoring the opposition and quite another to play the cards close to the vest and hold the enemy in check and play for a single stroke or two to get the winning margin . . . Sutherland, a conservative in all things, chose the latter method, and his success speaks volumes for his judgment.

After beating Ohio Northern, 47-0; West Virginia, 40-0, and Duquesne, 33-0, in the first three games, Pitt never scored more than three touchdowns in a game, and registered that many only twice . . . The Army was beaten, 18-13; Ohio State played to that scoreless deadlock; Notre Dame downed, 12-0; Penn beaten, 19-12; Nebraska tied, 0-0; Carnegie Tech beaten, 6-0, and Stanford topped, 7-0, in that order . . . A total of just two touchdowns were scored in the last three games, yet two of them were won and one tied . . . Through the entire 10 games, only two teams were able to score against Pitt—Army and Penn—to the extent of two touchdowns apiece . . . And it seems to run in our mind that at the outset Sutherland had to replace his entire line of the 1931 season.

In the last seven games, just 62 points were scored by Pitt against 25 by the opposition, an average of considerably less than three to one, yet five games were won and two tied in this string . . . These figures attest to the defensive strength of the Pitt team, an eleven able to sit on a slender mar-

DUKES TO PLAY TOUGH CARD

Duquesne University athletic officials tomorrow will hold a special meeting to pass on the invitation of Texas Christian to a charity game in Dallas, Tex., Christmas afternoon.

The Dukes also are considering a game with another Texas school—Rice Institute—which is likely to be on the Laydenmen's regular card in 1933. Waynesburg and Bucknell figure to be other new Duquesne grid foes next fall. The Bluffites' 1933 slate, with the possibility that a tenth game will be added, shapes up as follows:

Waynesburg at Forbes Field.
West Virginia at Forbes Field.
W. & J. at Washington.
West Virginia Wesleyan at Forbes Field.
Geneva at Beaver Falls or Forbes Field.
Pitt at Stadium.
Westminster at Forbes Field.
Bucknell at Forbes Field.
Rice at Houston, Tex.

U. S. C. Captures Coast Grid Title

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Southern California's Trojans clinched their second successive Pacific Coast Conference football championship by defeating Washington, 9-6 Thanksgiving Day while the previously undefeated University of California at Los Angeles tumbled from a first place tie to third position.

Washington State, by edging out U. C. L. A., 3-0, claimed second place honors. The last Coast Conference game of the season will take place next Saturday, with U. C. L. A. opposing Washington, in Los Angeles.

AUTO RACE POSTPONED

LOCALS FINISH TOUGH SEASON UNBEATEN

By JESS CARVER

The goofy part of it all is that this Pitt football team wasn't supposed to go any place in particular this fall. It was a "field" team, and by most folks, coupled in the betting along with other clubs that were counted on to be tough, but hardly of championship caliber.

When the season was just crawling from its cocoon we had a Pitt team with a new line, and the toughest and most difficult schedule in the country. Three weeks later the situation was even worse, for the Panthers had evidenced signs of great power and had every opponent remaining on the schedule laying back pointed for 'em. Coach Sutherland said his team would be lucky to get through with only two defeats, and he meant what he said.

EXECUTIONERS EXECUTED

The boys were resigned to the slaughter, but wound up by socking the executioners with their own axes.

Today, with the possible exception of Southern California, the Pitts would be even money against any eleven in the land, including Notre Dame's fine team.

They rate as champions of the East, do those tired Panthers, thanks to their own triumphs over Penn, Army, Carnegie Tech and West Virginia, and Notre Dame's booting of the Cadets Saturday. Boy, page the keeper of the crown! Let's be having one for the Pitts.

Pitt, Southern California, Notre Dame, Colgate and Auburn compose the "Big Five" of the nation's football list today. Of the list, the Panthers have come through the hardest schedule, with the Irish second and Southern California third. Much as I like Andy Kerr and respect his ability as a football teacher, I find it difficult to tear my hair (what there is of it) over the schedule his Red Raiders played . . . at least, when compared with that of Pitt's, or Notre Dame's or Southern Cal's.

Stanford proved a disappointment here Sat'day. My goodness, the Indians' offense looked like a roughhouse in a nursery. It wasn't the attack the Stanford flashed in New York against the Army a couple years back, or even as classy as the one used to knock off Dartmouth last year. The reason, to these peepers, lay in the fact that Pop didn't appear to have the men. Those Stanford backs were not particular fast and certainly they failed to show any exceptional blocking ability. Maybe the team missed Jack Hillman, the regular fullback, but even his presence in the lineup hardly would have speeded up the handling of the ball on those reverses and fakes.

INDIANS PRAISE FOES

The Stanfords were outspoken in their praise of the two Pitt tackles, in Ted Dailey and Muggsy Skladany, the ends and in Heller and Bob Hogan. They classed Cuba and Walton as the best tackles they'd played against this year.

The bid to the Rose Bowl is still hanging fire, and it would not surprise me to have the committee hold off until after the Notre Dame-Southern California game next week. If the Irish go out there and kick Southern Cal around, you can lay it on the line they'll give the Panthers first consideration.

Right now, the choice lies between Michigan, Pitt and Colgate, and in about the order named. They'd like to have Michigan, but before the Wolverines can accept, they must get the o. k. of other members of the Big Ten and a man close to the situation in the Conference tells me that this permission will not be given.

As far as Kerr's team is concerned, West of the Mississippi they think Colgate is something you plaster on your face when the whiskers need trimming. They know Andy Kerr out there on the Coast, but they've been studying up on the Colgate schedule and the effect hasn't exactly caused them to break out the red-fire.

TEAMS WANT MONEY

It is by no means improbable that Pitt will engage in a post-season game other than the one with Southern California. The locals have been approached by another eleven regarding a ball game Christmas Day, and the Pitt authorities have taken the matter under advisement. Whether they like it or not, all schools with a possible chance for playing in extra-schedule contests this year are eyeing the matter from a financial angle. The dough has been shyly elusive this fall for all the boys . . . and even the remote glimpse of a pot full of extra dollars brings about a case of acute palm-itch.

You don't see anyone turning down the chance to lay away an odd sovereign these days, things being as they are.

TEAMS CLOSE CAMPAIGNS

All teams in the tri-state area save Carnegie Tech and Davis Elkins cleaned up their 1932 slates last week. Tech meets Georgetown in Washington this week and D. and E. plays Dayton Uni-

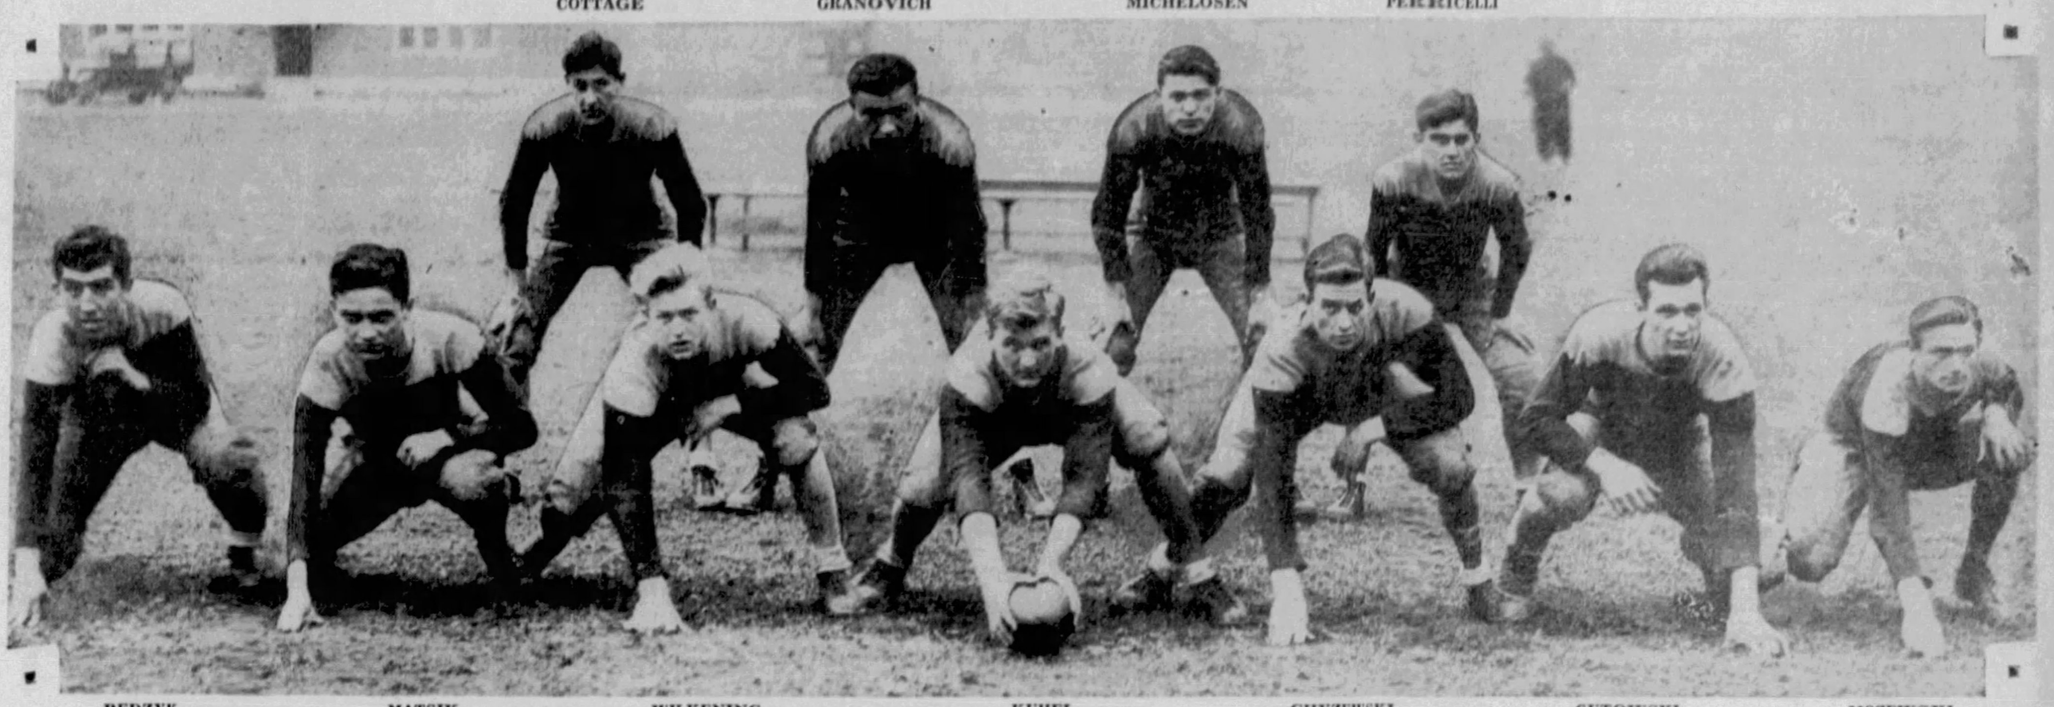
RUBENSTEIN HAS FINE RECORD AS AMBRIDGE COACH

Ambridge High School Eleven, Champion of Western Pennsylvania Class A Schools



The Ambridge High School football team, undefeated and untied in nine games, is the successor to Clairton High as champion of the Class A schools of the W. P. I. A. L. The squad, coached by Moe Rubenstein, scored eight victories in a row over Class A opponents and was the only contender for the title with a perfect slate for the season, one of the best in years. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

BRIDGERS MAKE RAPID CLIMB TO HEIGHTS

By JULIUS LEVIN

Four long years of successful coaching, during which time his teams have met and defeated some of the best scholastic elevens in Western Pennsylvania, have brought their reward to Moe Rubenstein, mentor at Ambridge High School, Class A champion of the W. P. I. A. L.

Moe Rubenstein

Rubenstein, a former basketball and football star at Fifth Avenue High School and Geneva College, assumed the coaching reins at Ambridge High School when the Bridgers were more than pleased to hold the opposition down to a low score and immediately Ambridge lost its complex for moral victories and started its upward climb. It has been climbing with reckless abandon since.

PROUD OF COACH

That Ambridge High School students and townsfolk are proud of Rubenstein for his remarkable success is putting it mildly. Not only has he won the respect of all connected with Ambridge High School, but he is ranked by Beaver Valley scholastic authorities as one of the best coaches in that section of Western Pennsylvania.

In his four-year career at Ambridge, Rubenstein's elevens have scored 32 victories, have been tied twice and beaten four times, quite an enviable record for a coach who is one of the youngest mentors in the business.

While Ambridge went through the recent season without meeting defeat, the fans in the Bridge town regard the 1930 season one of the best ever turned in by Rubenstein. During the 1930 campaign Ambridge scored 11 victories in as many starts without allowing the opposition to score.

REBUILDS ELEVEN

Rubenstein faced the 1932 campaign far from optimistically as graduation took a heavy toll of 17 lettermen from his football list of 1931. Yet in spite of this tremendous handicap he succeeded in building a team that finished the season the only undefeated and untied eleven among the class A schools of the W. P. I. A. L.

Listed among Ambridge's victims this season were four powerful class A contenders, all of whom were undefeated prior to their battles with the Bridgers.

Rochester, New Brighton, Mt. Lebanon and California were sporting perfect records when they stumbled before the powerful attack of the Bridgers. New Brighton, which was defeated, 7-6, later aided Ambridge to clinch the class A title by upsetting Beaver Falls in their Thanksgiving Day battle. Beaver Falls had scored seven straight class A triumphs before losing to George Rourke's scrappy eleven.

THREE STAND OUT

In passing out credit for the fine showing of the 1932 champions one should not overlook the great performances of Ralph Chyzewski, at guard; Eddie Gutowski, captain and star tackle, and John Michelosen, quarterback, three boys who rank with the greatest stars in district scholastic circles. All three played consistent football throughout the season. The record of the Ambridge elevens during Rubenstein's reign as coach follows:

GOOD FOES MET BY PEPPE

Vince Dundee, Gorilla Jones, George Courtney, Pete Susky, Joey La Grey and Tiger Thomas.

Those are the outstanding men fought by Johnny Peppe, the Philadelphia middleweight, who takes on Frankie Goosby, local Negro puncher, in the main bout of the weekly boxing show in the Arena on the North Side, Friday night.

Peppe has done all of his boxing in the East, and his record is impressive. He is the rugged type of fighter who can live under a punch, and punching is the best thing Goosby does.

Between Rounds

Following is the card of bouts arranged for the benefit amateur boxing show for the Rev. Leo McIntyre, Catholic priest, who is ill, and carded for G. B. U. Hall, Brownsville road and Arlington avenue, tonight: Sam Crovatta vs. Matt Ozanick, Bill Schwerin vs. Al Quall, Jimmy Campbell vs. Bill Zurich, Freddie Leirg vs. Tony Caslon, Lloyd Walcott vs. Tubby Mills, Jack Marifco vs. Walter Zack, Jimmy Ferry vs. S. gin until the cows come home, or go out and get a touchdown when the situation demanded it. Notre Dame was fought off for three quarters and scored upon twice in the final period. Tech was scored upon in the third period, and the Stanford touchdown was made in the opening period and then "sat on."

The explanation of Pitt's lack of a greater scoring punch may be found in the fact that it played conservatively, generally well within itself, and that it lacked the speedy offensive guards so necessary in the Warner system of play . . . Its guards were whales on defense, but could not pull out of the line and into the interference quite fast enough on the attack against the stronger teams.

Stanford's defeat here was its fourth of the season, along with a scoreless tie, after having started off with five victories, so that it probably did as well as could be expected following its long trip after that scoreless battle with California at Berkeley, Cal., the week before . . . Southern California started the downfall of Warner's team by beating it, 13-0, and Pop said Saturday night that Pitt was a better team than the Trojans . . . U. C. L. A. beat the Cardinals, 13-0, after the Southern California game, and then Washington won, 18-13 . . . Followed a 59-0 victory over the California Aggies and the California tie before the game here.

The end of the season finds Pitt with two all-America candidates in Warren Heller, the great all-round halfback, and Muggsy Skladany, the end. . . . It is the only district team with any all-America players . . . If any team deserves a hand more than this one, at the end of a long trail, it is not visible in the naked eye.

Notre Dame's grand comeback to defeat the Army by a score of 21 to 0 on Saturday is something to write home about . . . After their collapse against Pitt at the Stadium, the Irish looked like just another football team . . . But they came on to crush the team that almost beat Pitt, and that's a great big something.—HARRY KECK.

Pitt in Running For Rockne Trophy

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The Knute K. Rockne Memorial Trophy, symbolic of the national football championship under the Dickinson rating system, will go to Michigan, Pittsburgh or Southern California.

Prof. Frank G. Dickinson, of the University of Illinois, originator of the system, today said the field of 110 teams used in calculating his ratings, had been reduced to the undefeated Wolverines, Panthers and Trojans, but that his figures were not complete enough to indicate which had the edge.

The final rating will be made after the Notre Dame-Southern California game December 10. The trophy is sponsored by the famous "four horsemen" of Notre Dame, Harry Stuhldreher, Jim Crowley, Don Miller and Elmer Layden.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

By GIB MARSH

Thousands of big-game hunters are quartered in their hunting camps in the mountains waiting for the opening of the Pennsylvania deer season on Thursday. Every day automobiles and trucks may be observed along the highways bound for the mountain wilderness, loaded with camping equipment and supplies for the two weeks' season on the legal buck deer.

The hunting will be heavy throughout the mountain regions, especially in Elk, Forest and Potter counties in the northern border and in the central counties, Center, Clearfield, Clinton and parts of Lycoming and Huntingdon counties. There will be thousands of hunters in the southern border counties, Adams, Fulton and parts of Bedford and Franklin counties. The shooting around the Phillips preserve back of Ligonier, in Westmoreland County, will be participated in by an army of hunters. Last year, when the season was open on does and bucks, more than 1,000 head were killed in the last-named section.

The big-game hunters of Philadelphia likely will journey into Sullivan, Wyoming and Tioga counties. The sale of non-resident hunters' licenses has been large, sportsmen from New York, Ohio and West Virginia purchasing the legal permits to hunt deer in the Keystone State. The deer season is closed now in New York State, and reports show the New York sportsmen made quite a killing, nearly 25,000 head being bagged. However, in New York spiked bucks may be killed, a practice of which the best minds in big-game conservation do not approve.

The deer-shooting seasons in Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota will close on Wednesday, and in former years those states led the nation in large kills, from 15,000 head to 20,000 head being the average bag for the season. However, the shooting includes spike bucks in those states, making more shooting opportunities for the hunters than in the Keystone State, where only matured bucks having pointed antlers are legal quarry.

Leifield Released As St. Paul Pilot

ST. PAUL, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Release of Albert P. Leifield as manager of the St. Paul American Association baseball club was announced today by President R. J. Connery.

Connery said that due to decreased receipts he expected to name a playing manager for 1933 and might select one while attending the minor league baseball sessions at Columbus next week.

Leifield's Saints finished seventh in the eight-team race last season, and Connery from time to time expressed dissatisfaction with his generalship.

WOMEN IN CUE DUEL

AUBURN HIT BY ILLNESS

ATLANTA, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Auburn's Plainsmen, unbeaten in nine games this year, may be halted and knocked out of the Southern Conference football championship by an unscheduled foe—influenza.

Auburn faces South Carolina in Birmingham Saturday in its final test. The experts had figured this would be just another game for the speedy Plainsmen, but an unforeseen danger developed in an influenza epidemic that now lists 14 of the 37 varsity players among its victims.

The epidemic struck the Auburn campus last week and caused Coach Chet Wynn to call off practice for several days in the hopes his athletes would regain their health, but when the sessions were resumed Saturday the hospital list was larger than ever.

Capt. Jimmy Hitchcock, the crack halfback, thus far has escaped sickness, but half of the regular linemen and Quarterback Williams are among those missing.

On Saturday, Wash-Jeff brought a somewhat drab campaign to a brilliant close by kayoing the good old Mountaineers, 13 to 0. The West Virginians entered the game the favorites, too, but so did the Army. Thanksgiving Day, St. Vincent bowed to Davis Elkins, but gave Cam Henderson's Hurricane a busy afternoon before succumbing and the Dukes brought a highly successful campaign to a close by nosing out Geneva, 3-0. The same day, Tech was beaten for the sixth time in seven games by New York University and West Virginia Wesleyan crumbled before a resourceful Marshall eleven. The afternoon previous, Grove City defeated Thiel in a game postponed from a week ago Saturday.

TOURNEY SITE SET

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Prescott S. Bush, secretary of the United States Golf Association, announced yesterday the executive committee had approved the recommendation of the women's committee of the U. S. G. A. and awarded the 1933 women's championship to the Exmoor Country Club, Chicago. The competition will start the week of August 28.

HELLER TIES FOR LEAD

Warren Heller, Pitt's all-America halfback, and Johnson, star of St. Vincent's Bearcat eleven, wound up the district football season tied for top honors, each ringing up eight touchdowns for a total of 48 points. They are not certain of sharing the honor permanently, for if George Kavel, of Carnegie, can get himself four scores against Georgetown this week, he can make it a three-way tie. The idea is unlikely, however.

With Heller and Johnson in first place, third position goes to Guido (Shorty) Troiana, of Geneva, with 44 points. Troiana only scored seven touchdowns, however, his additional points coming on goals after touchdown.

Allen, of West Virginia, placed fourth with 43 points and McDonald, Duquesne's brilliant sophomore, was fifth with 42. Izzy Weinstock, of Pitt, placed sixth with 33; Rab Currie, of Waynesburg, has 31 and Art Bachtel, of West Virginia Wesleyan, 30.

BUSH HOLDS TOP

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—In the last full week of Eastern football no scoring star arose to threaten the lead of Louis Bush, the little Massachusetts State halfback who completed his season a week ago with a total of 114 points. And none seemed likely to reach such heights in the few remaining games.

Sam Clayman, of Tufts, maintained his field goal lead with three, two up on Chase, of Brown, and Kelly, of Boston College.

The skaters, all members of the United States Olympic skating team last winter, are Eddie Schroeder, Chicago; Valentine Bialis, Utica, N. Y.; Bert Taylor, New York; Edie Wedge, Detroit, and Carl Springer, New York. The team, accompanied by Kalteaux, will sail for Norway December 28.

Stanford Battle Lacking In Thrills—Harpster

By Howard Harpster

Geneva College Coach; All-America Quarterback at Carnegie Tech, 1928.

For a big intersectional game, I found the Pitt-Stanford football battle at the Stadium Saturday rather uninteresting. Hard-fought it was, but lacking in the thrills the fans had expected from two such famous and highly-touted elevens.

The so-called Warner hocus-pocus was largely missing. What there was of it fooled no one but the Stanford players, who tripped over themselves in their efforts to perform the intricate maneuvers.

Stanford's line was outcharged, and, if it had not been for the fine defensive work of Bill Corbus in the line and Sim in the backfield, Pitt would have run up a larger score.

H. Harpster

Poor play by the Stanford safety man gave Pitt the only scoring chance it capitalized. His failure to catch a comparatively easy punt on the 15-yard line set the stage. He backed up and followed the rolling ball, waiting for it to roll over the goal line, and permitted Ted Dailey to touch it down six inches from the final stripe, from which point a poor kick from behind the goal gave Pitt the ball on the 25-yard line, with the touchdown following.

Having failed to trap the punt, the safety man should have made it his business to block out Dailey, keeping him from the ball, which then would have rolled the remaining six inches to the goal line.

PITT LINE STARS

The work of the Pitt line was outstanding throughout the game, while Heller and Weinstock were highly effective in the backfield department.

Thus ends another big football season in Pittsburgh, with a comparatively drab but none the less satisfactory fadeout insofar as the local fans are concerned, with the Pitt team having come through a severe schedule undefeated. Coach Jock Sutherland has done a good job and merits the applause of all followers of the sport, not only here, but throughout the land wherein the pigskin holds sway over a three months' span each fall.

SQUASH LOOP LINEUP CUT

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Precisely when all hands were set for inauguration of 1932-1933 loop festivities, the breaks rolled along last week-end and scrambled Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association Inter-Club League plans a'plenty, even unto the point of causing a fortnight's setback to the starting date of team action.

According to Secretary McCook Reed, of the P. S. R. A., University Club has definitely withdrawn from its berth in the Class A sector of the circuit, a fact necessitating complete redraft of the season's card.

Dearth of players is responsible for the default. With Paul Hicks, of last year's array transferred to New York and with Alf Hamilton, of the same outfit, temporarily retired, only three performers—Capt. Frank McClintock, Frank White and Charley Fagan—were available for the U. C. host.

A special executive meeting of the racquet group has been called for Wednesday. At this conclave, an entire new Class A schedule will be drawn up to include P. A. A., Keystone A. C., Pittsburgh Golf Club, and Allegheny Country Club.

Destiny of the crack U. C. trio left more or less out of the picture by their club's decision to refrain from the winter's pastiming will be determined at the impending session. McClintock has been tentatively slated for the comparatively weak Allegheny C. C. combine, but injury to Capt. Siverd, of the champion P. A. A. crew may mean that the erstwhile University Club leader will be returned to the Winged Head troupe.

White, former national premier, may now go to Allegheny, while Fagan will undoubtedly resume operations with the Keystoners for whom he cavorted in 1930.

Irish Get Rousing Welcome Home

NOTRE DAME, Ind., Nov. 28.—(INS.)—With the din of an uproarious welcome still ringing in their ears, Notre Dame's conquering football heroes turned their faces westward today and settled down to the serious task of preparing for their last game of the season—with the University of Southern California.

Coach Hunk Anderson could not conceal his elation over the Ramblers' startling 21-to-0 victory Saturday over Army. But, he struck a note of discretion amidst all the wild celebrating by predicting that the Southern California battle at Los Angeles, December 10, will prove an imposing struggle.

The Irish coach and squad were the objects of a frenzied ovation when they arrived here yesterday afternoon. Virtually the entire student body of 2,700 undergraduates and 15,000 South Bend residents turned out at the railway station to give the gridders a noisy welcome.

SOUTHPAW LACK IN BIG SERIES HURTS CUBS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Their National League rivals had sufficient high-grade left-handers to deprive the Pirates of the pennant, yet the league looked in vain for a topnotch southpaw in the titular competition with the champions of the American League.

There you have irony of a bitter sort.

The Yankees, like the Pirates, operate on a lefthand drive. The Buccos had five southpaw hitters in their lineup and Joe McCarthy's battlefront was a similar array, with Ruth, Gehrig, Combs, Dickey and Sewell in daily action.

The American League, however, has only a few first-class portsiders and the pennant winners, therefore, were not heckled after the fashion of the Pirates, for whom the rival pilots saved their crack southpaws.

BUCS BETTER THAN CUBS

The Cubs were the lone club of the National League which had no left-hander to harass the Pirates. Now consider this angle, you fans. The Buccos were the only team in the league to win the entire season's series over the flag-winners. The Bruins won more than they lost from every other club in the league.

Any hypothetical case may be disputed, but those people who still believe that left-hand hitters should hit left-hand pitchers as well as they hit right-handers have plenty of concrete evidence in front of them to convert their viewpoint.

The Cubs were without a good left-hander, and hence could not compete favorably against the Pirates, who smeared the best kind of right-hand pitching throughout the season. The Cubs moved into the world series, with their right-handers up, and received a worse shellacking than the Buccos gave them.

CAN YOU IMAGINE THIS?

Jake May apparently was the best pitcher the Cubs threw against the Yanks. Jake can't "light" in the National League, but he gave the Yankees more trouble than any Cub sharpshooter. Bush, Root and the others were tailor-made for the Ruth, Gehrig and company. No wonder Charley Grimm is seeking a southpaw pitcher.

Any National League sympathizer, after considering the trouble the Yankees encountered in May would like to see any of these southpaws flipping the ball to the Yanks: Hallahan, French, Clark, Walker, Hubbell, Brandt and J. Elliott.

Perhaps you will recall that a quiet kid named Bill Hallahan made the Athletics eat out of his hands in the battles of two separate world series. Great as are Ruth and Gehrig, they doubtless would be flabbergasted by Hallahan, whose curve is much better than any hook the great Grove can throw.

DAILEY CALLS M.-A. CONFAB

EBENSBURG, Pa., Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Initial plans for the 1933 Middle Atlantic League season will be laid in Clarksburg, W. Va., next Sunday, Elmer Dailey, president of the circuit said last night.

Presidents of the six clubs in the league last year—Clarksburg, Bluefield, Charleston and Huntington, W. Va., Cumberland, Md., and Johnstown, Pa.—and also men from other cities have been asked to attend the meeting.

Wheeling, W. Va., a member of the league for seven years prior to the past season, and Zanesville, O., are expected to send representatives, Dailey said, while other cities, including Altoona, Pa. and Portsmouth, O., may be represented.

Turk Riley, veteran backer of baseball clubs at Zanesville, will represent that city. Mrs. Charles Holloway, widow of the former Wheeling owner, will select the man to talk over matters for Wheeling.

Six Army Grid Stars in Hospital

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 28.—(INS.)—Just how badly Felix Vidal, star Army back, was injured in the Notre Dame game will be known today after an X-ray examination.

Vidal was one of six Army players who went to the hospital on their arrival from New York yesterday. The others were Ken Fields, Tom Kilday, Pete Kopesak, Harvey Jablonsky and Abe Lincoln.

Whether any will miss the Navy game Saturday was not known.

SING SING BEATEN

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 28.—(INS.)—A minion of the law known as Cuddeback was a much disliked person at Sing Sing Prison today. Cuddeback, playing fullback for the Port Jervis police football team, scampered through the prison eleven yesterday for a touchdown and caused the Sing Sing gridders to end their season with a 7-to-0 defeat.

Coach Informed Of Dad's Death During Game

DURHAM, N. C., Nov. 28.—(INS.)—A messenger boy handed a telegram to Wallace Wade, Duke University football coach, in the third quarter of the Duke-Washington & Lee game Saturday.

He read it, stuffed it into his pocket, and bowed his head in his hands for a few minutes. Then, without comment, he forced his eyes back to the playing field, where his team was winning. After the game he boarded a train for Trenton, Tenn.

M'DONALD WINS CUP FRAY

By TOM BIRKS

McDonald successfully passed into the second round of the National Amateur cup competition yesterday afternoon, defeating the De Marco club at Cuddy grounds by a 2-to-0 score.

One week ago the teams battled to a deadlock over a period of two hours, and for a time yesterday it seemed as if another tie score would be the result. However Paige, the McDonald center halfback, took matters into his own hands and succeeded where the forward line failed.

PAIGE SCORES TWICE

Two of his drives found the Cuddy net, and the lower Panhandle boys were in the next round of the National elimination.

It was a great game, but only a small crowd watched action. Two Keystone League senior games were played in the neighborhood, and these took the big part of the Miller Run soccer following.

The lineup:

McDonald—2.		De Marco—0.
Wachter	G.	Lawton
Edwards	R. B.	Humpreys
Peltzer	L. B.	Bryga
McVicker	R. H.	Pantieko
Paige	C. H.	Benesh
Schollard	L. H.	Deako
Penner	O. R.	Solway
Kosnick	I. R.	Thewalt
Guaran	I. C.	Sowlosky
Bangarre	I. L.	Consalle
Schollard	O. L.	De Marco

Goals—Paige, 2.
Referee—O'Conner.

MORGAN IN TIE

In the Keystone loop, Morgan and Bridgeville, rivals over a period of many years, battled to a tie. Plenty of action marked the tilt. The other game at Cecil found the Curry club defeating Cecil, 2 to 0.

Lopsided scores marked the playing of the Ohio-Penn League games, Midland swamped Aliquippa, 6 goals to 0, and the Tiltonville team duplicated this score at the expense of the East Liverpool squad.

In the Washington County circuit, the Donohoes nosed out Lincoln Hill, 3 goals to 2, and Langeloth defeated Atlasburg by a 3-to-0 score.

M'GRATHS WIN

The McGraths beat Houston, 3-2; Sturgeon nosed out Grove, 1 to 0; Coverdale beat Local Union, 1 to 0; Sygan and Steubenville played a hard game, Sygan winning, 1 to 0; Shannon Braves stopped Leesdale, 5 to 1, and Primrose beat West Carnegie, 4 goals to 0.

In the Allegheny Valley circuit, Tarentum beat Curtisville in a well played game, 1-0; Springdale turned in an easy victory over Barsotti, 4 to 0; Kinlock tied Millvile, 2-2, and the fourth game found Harwick and the Athletics playing a tie.

GAME TO KEEP 'BIG TRAIN'

The blue-eyed giant who was let out at the end of last season by the Washington Senators after 20 years as their great fireball pitcher and four as their manager, expects to be back in the game this coming season, although probably not in the big league.

Good-natured as ever, the "Big Train" of baseball history sprawled at ease in his roomy old farmhouse in nearby Maryland and talked over his own past, present and future, as well as that of the game.

He shied only at naming for publication the clubs that are seeking his services. It can be said, however, that Johnson has several offers, including a promising minor league managerial proposition, and a definite announcement may be forthcoming before the Hot Stove League season is many weeks old.

U. S. Tennis Stars Beat Australians

BRISBANE, Nov. 28.—(INS.)—The United States today won the first Australian-American international tennis tournament, capturing eight matches in the final two days of play. The results:

Magrath defeated Gledhill, 6-2, 8-6; Vines defeated Hopman, 7-5, 9-11, 6-3; Moon and Sproule defeated Allison and Van Ryn, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3; Allison and Van Ryn defeated Hopman and McGrath in two sets played Saturday and another today, taking the last 9-7.

BRITONS NEAR VICTORY

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The Marylebone Cricket Club today had in sight an innings victory over New South Wales as it completed its first with 520 runs against 273 and 68 for three for the Australian team.

POURQUOI PAS II WINS

AUTEUIL, France, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—A. Fernandez's Pourquoi Pas II won the Prix Henri De Breteuil, a 3,100-meter steeplechase, by three lengths here yesterday. A. Sambon's Jacoby was second and J. Henriot's Dictateur third.

Listening In on Radio Gossip

That Ed Wynn broadcast at the Nixon not so long ago rated $1,036.89 for the Welfare Fund . . . Mildred Bailey plans to introduce a brand new song every week . . . Reports are that Ray Perkins won't be off the air long . . . Frank McCravy, who used to sing hill-billy songs on NBC, is a member of the South Carolina state legislature . . . Eddie Cantor will author a series of articles for one of the largest national weeklies . . . Kate Smith, Harry Horlick, Ruth Etting, Paul Whiteman, John S. Young, Jessica Dragonette, Rubinoff and Richard Gordon are leading in that United American Bosch Radio Star poll . . . Ferde Grofe is the official composer laureate of Radio City.

Miss Bailey

Bing Crosby, who's been away from the air waves for some time now, is making a place for himself in the movies . . . He's to be starred in four feature pictures during the next two years. And other radio personalities soon to be seen on the screen: Stoopnagle and Budd, Cliff Edwards, Singin' Sam, Ruth Etting and Tony Wons.

Morton Downey is slightly annoyed by all the publicity given the expected heir . . . Privately, he hopes it'll be a boy.

Countless persons have been asking Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, for copies of George Seibel's NBC network address on "George Washington Among His Books." The address was printed in the Congressional Record of June 24, 1932.

Add candidates for Radio's Hall of Fame: Jack Pearl, who's credited with provoking 4,050,000,000 laughs a night, which, according to Dr. Charles L. Phillips, of New York' Polyclinic Hospital, will more surely keep the doctor away than an equal number of apples . . . because laughing helps the digestion.

Speaking of Jack, fans in all parts of the country are forming "Baron Munchausen" clubs to listen in on his programs and then see who can tell the biggest lie. The prize whopper is then sent in to Pearl, who keeps them for possible use on the air. To date 17 clubs have sprung up . . . and they open every letter with "Hello, you liar."

Latest News Flashes Four Times Daily

Speaking direct from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, flashes the latest news to WCAE and WJAS listeners at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. today. His schedule is the same tomorrow, with the exception of the 2:15 broadcast, listed on WCAE only.

Globe-Trotter To Become Columnist

Thousands of listeners daily hear Louis L. Kaufman as he globe-trots for the Sun-Telegraph over WCAE and WJAS.

And now, because his popularity has grown to such proportions that he can't possibly answer all of the telephone calls and letters he receives, he's going to start writing his own column — "Globe-Trotting" — to appear regularly in the radio section of the Sun-Telegraph beginning tomorrow.

Mr. Kaufman

The column will be devised specially to dispose of questions and requests and to pass on any good ideas his listeners might forward.

He's a regular fellow . . . Tears into the editorial rooms for his broadcasts and says he's "scared to death" before going on the air despite his more than eight years of experience.

As to description . . . He has straight dark hair, brown eyes, is about 5 feet 7 inches tall and slender. He's always dressed immaculately, and doesn't indulge in cigarets or illegal beverages.

He's a real Pittsburgher. Attended Schenley High and was graduated from Penn State in 1924. Then he started in radio at KQV, moving later to KDKA for an eight-year stay. Meanwhile, he studied law at Pitt, received his degree and was admitted to the bar in 1927.

He became the Sun-Telegraph Globe-Trotter Christmas, 1931, and says he likes it better than anything else he's ever done in radio.

MARKETS ACT WELL UNDER DEBT NEWS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The sensitive markets have withstood reasonably well unsettling news in connection with the inter-Allied debts.

This is all the more noteworthy in the light of the attempt of propagandists to link debt cancellation in the financial mind with world-wide economic recovery.

As a matter of fact, the tendency to regard the meeting of December 15 payments as either bullish or bearish entails a remarkable degree of oversimplification. In truth, the situation is infinitely complicated, and one outcome or another might help certain domestic industries and hurt certain others.

Mr. Rukeyser

EFFECT STUDIED

For example, if all reparations and inter-allied debts were wiped off the slate, the principal net effect would be to take a tax of $300,000,000 a year off German industry and throw an additional tax of about $300,000,000 on American industry, leaving the American taxpayer about $600,000,000 worse off than before as compared with the German.

Now such an arrangement could hardly be construed as bullish for American industries which compete in world markets with German industries, like the great chemical and electrical trades. On the other hand, it might be helpful to wheat, cotton and copper on the theory that the process of forgiveness would promote the capacity in Germany and other debtor countries to consume current commodities.

DISCOUNTS BEAR THEORY

The president of one great American industrial corporation, who urges that insistence on payment of the war debts be made, discounts the theory that there is anything genuinely bearish to the American markets in the attitude of the American government, as articulated by President Hoover. He was asked:

"Why, then, did the markets sag as the news came out?"

His answer was:

BUYING OPPORTUNITY

That there is such naivete in the speculative mood was further indicated by the comment made on Saturday by a representative stock market analyst, who said:

"Sterling reached a low of $3.21 yesterday, only three cents above its post-war low of $3.18, established in the early part of 1920 following the crackup of the 1919 boom. If this latter level is broken and sterling starts a nose-dive into a price range unknown in modern times, we doubt very much that our securities markets could hold against the wave of uncertainty that would temporarily engulf investors and speculators throughout the world."

Of course, when and if prices break for mysterious reasons without demonstrated economic justification, they constitute buying opportunities for the level-headed and the analytical.

BRITISH POUND AT NEW LOW

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The British pound sterling, known for centuries as Europe's most stable currency, today toppled down to a record low price in terms of American dollars.

Foreign exchange dealers said London and New York were the principal sellers. The quotation here gave ground early in the day to $3.18 for London cables, the 1920 low point, and later fell through that figure to $3.17½. There was a rally to $3.18¾ in the final dealings.

Apprehension considering the war debt tangle was further aggravated today with the approach of the time when Britain must make a payment approximating $100,000,000 to the holders of unassented United Kingdom 5½ per cent bonds. This payment is due on December 1 to American holders of British war loan bonds who did not care to accept the lower interest obligations offered in the conversion plan.

Forbes

Forbes Looks For Payments By Europeans

By B. C. FORBES

A PREDICTION: Neither Britain nor France will refuse to pay what they owe us on December 15.

Another prediction: Subsequent negotiations will lead to revision which will take cognizance of actual conditions in different countries and will find Britain entitled to more concessions than France.

Mr. Forbes

One more prediction: By New Year, the whole subject of war debts will have ceased to monopolize international attention.

THE AMERICAN TAXPAYER has little reason to quarrel with the outcome of the Hoover-Roosevelt confab. Doubtless European nations are bitterly disappointed. They have found Uncle Sam so "easy" in the past, found him so bountiful, found him so ready to be drawn into generous financial deals, that his unwillingness to be further mulcted must have come as something of a shock.

What European nations must get through their heads, however, is that the Uncle Sam of today is not the plutocratic Uncle Sam of the days when foreign debts were slashed right and left, or of the days when colossal foreign loans could be sold here in the twinkling of an eye. Uncle Sam today has his own financial problems, his own political problems, his own social problems.

Uncle Sam already has the largest total tax bill in the world; he already has more unemployment than all European nations combined; he already is running up a governmental deficit heavier than that of any other country.

Moreover, the American taxpayer is already rebelling against the impossible burdens fastened on him by federal, state, county and community tax leviers. He is already struggling against financial adversity.

Hence, he has no stomach for submitting to be still further punished for the benefit of the nations who started the World War and dragged him into it. He insists upon a settlement in his interest. Until it can be proved to him that it is genuinely to his benefit to make

STOCK MARKET CLOSING TONE STEADY

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—The stock market was calm today, in the face of another break in sterling exchange, and a moderate sag in wheat. Share prices recovered after an early, irregular sag, and closed with a steady tone, with price changes largely fractional. The turnover was only about half a million shares.

The share market was obviously adopting a watchful waiting attitude. Some buying of the gold mining shares was prompted by the decline in sterling, and a little short covering appeared here and there. On the whole, however, professional traders kept to the sidelines.

Week-end trade reviews indicated that business was taking the usual course for this time of year. Standard Statistics Company said "business continues to recede at a rate equal to seasonal, or somewhat greater." The war debt problem, and the forthcoming session of Congress, were widely mentioned as injecting elements of uncertainty, but in any case, the business trend at this time is normally downward, and if the recession does not exceed the usual seasonal proportions, Wall street will not be disturbed.

The October railway net operating income reports attracted considerable attention, in that many of the leading carriers were able to show increases over the like month of last year. Gross, however, was generally lower, so that the gains in net merely reflected curtailment of expenses. How long the roads may be able to hold their maintenance expenditures to such low levels remains problematical. Railroad purchases of steel this year will probably be the smallest in more than a generation. One steel expert estimates that the total amount of steel rails rolled by mills this year will be the smallest since 1877.

Financial quarters awaited with keen interest the latest British note on the debt payment due December 15. In the meantime, commodity prices were somewhat less sensitive to the movement of sterling than they seemed last week. Bar silver sagged ⅛ cent to 25⅝ cents an ounce, however, the lowest in history.

GRAIN VALUES CLOSE LOWER

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—More than a cent a bushel setback in wheat prices today accompanied new all time bottom quotations for British exchange.

Lack of aggressive foreign demand for grain, together with uncertainty regarding the war debt situation, put a weight on wheat prices here. Decrease of 3,694,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply total failed to act as much of a counterbalance.

July delivery of wheat, representing the new 1933 crop, fell to a fresh bottom price record for the season. Wheat closed unsettled ½@1⅜ under Saturday's finish, corn ¼@⅝ down, oats ⅛@⅜ off, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents decline.

Continental Shares Loan Status Bared

BALTIMORE, Nov. 28.—(INS.)—Three New York banks carried vast loans to Continental Shares, Inc., despite an under-collateralization of $20,000,000, it was testified by George T. Bishop, president of the corporation, in Circuit Court today in hearings on the suit for a receivership for the investment trust.

Bishop further added that last August Continental Shares sustained a loss of $2,722,456 when the market further declined and banks cashed in some of this collateral.

COOLIDGE RAIL GROUP PLANS REFORMS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Far reaching proposals for rehabilitation of American railroads, including co-ordination of rail, air and bus transportation, are being considered by the Coolidge-Smith railroad commission, it was learned today.

Representatives of the body headed by former President Coolidge, including Bernard M. Baruch, have discussed the railroad problem with members of Congress.

The whole railroad situation may be aired in hearings before Senate and House committees on interstate commerce during the coming session in preparation for future legislation.

Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, chairman of the Senate committee, said he was impressed with the similarity of ideas of members of the Coolidge-Smith commission and many congressional students of the transportation question. The commission, he said, is studying intensely the co-ordination plan.

MAY REORGANIZE I. C. C.

An attempt to co-ordinate all major transportation systems would, it is admitted, entail a reorganization of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Commissioner Porter, of that body, has already suggested a director be named to handle administration and that the commission itself be a legislative and judicial body.

Members of the Coolidge-Smith Commission, according to Couzens, believe that the capital structure of railroads must be reduced if a return is to be earned.

This could be accomplished in part, according to Couzens, by separating all part of the railroad business not actually used in transportation and by the elimination of duplicate services.

SEEK NEW RATE BASIS

Under the Esch-Cummins act, railroads were permitted to consolidate ticket offices, and other forms of their business. Little has been accomplished along this line.

The railroad question will be presented to the House by Representative Rayburn (Dem.), of Texas, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

Rayburn proposes to push for enactment of bills repealing the recapture clause of the transportation act, providing a new basis of rate-making with the elimination of the so-called guarantee clause, and giving the Interstate Commerce Commission control over holding companies.

NAMED JUSTICE 13 TIMES

MEDINA, Tenn.—W. J. Bone has resigned himself to being a justice—an office he has held for 13 consecutive terms without ever making a campaign.

He first was elected in 1903 without his consent when living in the Sixteenth Civil District of Madison County. He told friends he did not want the office, but they insisted on qualifying him.

After being re-elected to that district justice post for six times, Bone decided he had had enough of politics, so he moved to another part of his farm, located just over the line in Gibson County.

But Bone had friends in Gibson County, and again without his consent, he was qualified for the post in the Gibson district. He had two opponents in his first Gibson election in 1916, but they were easily vanquished, even though Bone didn't want to defeat them.

During the 29 years he has been magistrate, Bone has performed more than 1,000 marriage ceremonies. He seldom accepts fees from bridegrooms.

...RY LID FALLS ON BOOM TOWN

LA SERENA, Chile.—(AP.)—Following a study of the requests of labor leaders that the gold washing area at Andacollo be declared a day zone, the provincial government has stipulated that Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays will be dry days at the settlement.

Labor leaders said thousands of unemployed had been tossing their gold earnings across bars and into cabarets at the week-ends, panning just enough gold to furnish them a "binge."

Andacollo is one of the boom towns of the new "gold rush," initiated with government aid to stimulate gold mining in the country.

HISTORIC PANEL RESCUED

BRISTOL, England.—(INS.)—A century-old wooden panel, belonging to the Ehrich Galleries, New York, that had been sent here for repairs, will be returned as a canvas picture.

The panel, depicting a hunting scene, was bought by the Galleries for $750.

It was handed over to two Bristol expert craftsmen, Joseph Jenkins and A. B. Pearce, who planed and chiselled the wood away until only a film of paint remained, and this has been transferred to a canvas.

COTTON EASY AT CLOSE

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—With general business restricted by uncertainty over the international debt situation, cotton eased off today under comparatively moderate offerings promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and the violent fluctuations in sterling exchange.

STEEL TRADE CONFIDENT

CLEVELAND, Nov. 28.—(AP.)—Reappraising its outlook for the final stretch of the year, the iron and steel industry is more confident of retaining the basis improvement of September and October and of resuming the upturn in the first quarter of 1933, said Steel today.

Trustworth indications now point to a progressively easier market situation the remainder of the year, but the deceleration is likely to be moderate and stay within seasonal bounds, the magazine stated in its weekly survey. The magazine said:

"In some products, the declines in demand noted the past two weeks have been temporarily arrested. Additional, though small, releases for automotive consumption reinforce this principal support of the market and assure substantial shipments to Detroit further into December than seemed probable.

"Railroad and building steel needs, in the aggregate, continue disappointing, and already the blight of purchasing restricted because of the approach of the inventory season is felt."

M. Sims, president of the division, vice president American Trust Company, San Francisco. The annual banquet will bring the conference to a close the evening of February 16.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Continued inactivity in the spot market and the circulation of December notices were responsible for renewed selling pressure in the sugar futures market today.

All positions sold into new low ground for the movement while some of the later deliveries were at new lows for the life of the contract.

December showed the maximum decline selling off from .84 to .78c or 9 points below the previous close while later deliveries declined 3 to 4 points with the general market at 2 p. m. at or within a point of these figures.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"What, for heaven's sakes? No such thing as love?" asked Van Alstyne, interrupted in a rather middle-aged dissertion on little Sally Morgan, Lady Staines, and her son.

"Going-on-nineteen."

Van Alstyne was silent. She asked, mischievously, "Is there?"

"I think so, Joyce."

They went into the Ritz. Young Staines was not in the lounge and Joyce and Van Alstyne went downstairs and found a table and presently, after her healthy order had been given, Van Alstyne left her and went in search of his friend.

A very tall, lean young man was approaching the table. Van Alstyne was beside him. They sat down, the informal introductions were made, Staines commanded quantities of tea and then sat back to look at Joyce.

REMEMBERS JOYCE

He thought her the prettiest girl he had ever seen. She was not, really, but he believed it, which amounts to the same thing.

Basil Staines had very blond hair and a short, clipped mustache. He had steel gray eyes and a beaked, imperious nose.

"Really? Where?"

He named the play, the approximate date, a week or so earlier.

"You were in a box."

"How nice of you to remember!" said Joyce.

"Quite involuntarily. One wouldn't, you know."

"Forget."

"He has a marvelous line," Joyce remarked to their host, and Van.

"He's rather noted for it," he agreed.

Basil was no strong, silent hero, the taciturn Britisher of fiction. He consumed quarts of strong tea, he waved crumpets perliously in the air and talked an amazing amount of sense and nonsense. He liked America. He liked New York. He liked his job. He liked everything. And it seemed perfectly obvious that he liked Joyce.

HURRIES FOR HOME

Shortly after 6 Joyce looked at her wrist watch and came to her feet with an audible gasp.

"For Pete's sake! I'll be drawn and quartered and maybe boiled in oil. Uncle Fred, will you get me a taxi or something? They'll be telephoning to the police station and the hospitals."

"Not a worried husband, Basil, her grandmother.

"Oh, I see, we had one of those once," Staines confided, with exaggerated relief. "Regular we-are-not-amused old-lady. I know them!"

When they reached the lobby Staines remembered an engagement and rushed off to telephone. But not before he took Joyce's hand firmly in his own.

"Perhaps. I'm in college, you know."

"Don't tell me that!" he implored her.

"But I do, Barnard. However, I have some free time."

"Well, I warned you," Van Alstyne said, watching her face.

"You did not!"

"I meant to, then. He's a breath-taking young idiot. I'm very fond of him, however."

THINKS OF BASIL

He put her into a taxi, and stood a moment on the curb. His eyes met hers, a little wistfully underneath their friendly smiling. A question, an appeal seemed to hover on his lips. But he did not speak save to wish her goodbye.

Driving home she remembered that he had probably wanted to ask her about her mother. To send a message, perhaps.

In a moment she had forgotten him. She was thinking of Staines. She'd never met anyone quite like him. So young, so sure of himself—not in the way of American boys were sure. He was charming, he was light. His mind was whimsical, alert; he had, she decided, a fascinating face, mobile, irregular, different. She would like to see him again. The sort of person one would never know whether to take seriously or not. Cool, she thought, a little amused at everything, himself included.

It was, of course, much later than her usual routine when she reached home. To her grandmother's instant query she said, carelessly, "It's my afternoon at the laboratory."

Louisa indicated her acceptance of the excuse, but Elizabeth, looking at her daughter's impassive face, was instantly and intuitively convinced that Joyce had fibbed.

Joyce saw Van Alstyne once more after their meeting and then to wish him a safe voyage. She had tea with him, alone, and they talked of nothing very much until he asked, abruptly, "Are you happy?"

"I suppose so. Yes, I am. Why not?"

DISCUSSES STUDY

She sketched little triangles and building blocks upon the hotel linen with the tine of the fork she held and frowned at the faintly traced designs. When she raised her eyes he saw the light in them, the restless, glancing light, had steadied into a flame.

"—It's hard to tell—I wanted to be a doctor, you know. Awfully. Grandmother wouldn't hear of it."

"I fancy not. Grandmother? What did your mother say to it?"

"Nothing—if she knew. I didn't tell her. Grandmother makes the decisions, you know. Frankly, it's her money."

He nodded. He knew, of course, the exact financial status of Lennox Sheldon's widow.

"She wouldn't let me. There was talk of making a debut after graduation and all that. I couldn't, somehow. I talked it over with the head of our school, Miss Cora. I'd had some biology, some chemistry, rather like what you get in high school, perhaps a little more. I liked it, showed some aptitude. Miss Cora suggested that I take certain courses at Barnard—the biology first, then histology."

"Heavenly Fathers, what's that?"

"Study of tissues. Uncle Fred, you're laughing at me!"

EXPLAINS DESIRES

"I could get a degree, taking other subjects in addition—four years—a B. S. But that isn't exactly what I want. I asked Grandmother if I could do this postgrad work and she said yes. Miss Cora helped to persuade her and so far she's been amiable about it. I think she believes I've taken it up just the way girls of her day acquired a smattering of—china painting, with just the same motives."

"We won't go into those. What are your real motives?"

"I can work the other courses into my schedule. A little physiology—other things. A sort of pre-medical business. Then I can get work in the laboratories, later—making slides, doing some drawing perhaps and—eventually——"

"Put yourself through medical school?" he asked.

"If I don't wait too long—and if I can."

"Oh, you can," he murmured abstractedly, looking at her. How old was she, 19? Young as April, with the slender, sterile-seeming figure of her generation, the eager face, the blue eyes.

His heart ached, profoundly. He was suddenly conscious of loving her in many ways, for many reasons—for herself, for her father, for her mother. If Elizabeth had married him, he would have been courtesy-father to Joyce. He'd have made it more than that, they would have come to a close companionship, a wonderful relation.

"You're going to have a bad time," he said, slowly.

OFFERS HELP

He seemed to see them there in the old house, three women of three generations. They were quite clear before him, the abyss dividing the one from the other, the struggle, the wordless warfare, the desperate voices with which they called, unheard, across the gulfs.

Her eyes questioned him.

"Joyce, promise me something?"

"Yes, Uncle Fred?"

"If you need me, in any way, to let me know?" As she was silent, he added, "You're determined to go through with this. Oh, don't answer me. I see that you are. Do you realize it may mean—a break?"

She nodded.

"You'll need money?" And you'll ask me for it? My dear, I cared deeply for your father and I loved your mother. Doesn't that give me a little claim on their child? I'll not marry, you know that. It's too late now. The one woman I wanted wouldn't have me, and I couldn't forgive me, be foolish enough to turn my eyes toward your delightful generation. I'll die a bachelor, quite happly, I suppose. There's a great deal of money you know, idle. Some of it will come to you at my death. I added a codicil to my will after I met you last summer, sitting in your funny little car, your absurd little face turned to the hills and sky. Well, that's all I'll say about it. You needn't frown at me, but if ever the time comes when you're up against it let me see you through? Borrow, if you like, if you'd rather, against what will be yours, eventually?"

She couldn't speak for the pressure at her throat, couldn't see him clearly for the bright drops on her lashes. He asked, without looking at her, "I've put it badly enough—but will you promise?"

"Yes—yes."

WANTS TO LEARN

He looked up then. She had no need of words in which to thank him. He understood.

"This doctor business. Somehow, I can't see you in an atmosphere of blood and disinfectants, can't see you wearing tailor-mades and sailor hats, carrying a little black bag and talking histories and symptoms—however, tell me why?"

"You've got 'em wrong," she assured him. "Professional women are smart as anything nowadays. Clothes, I mean. But, as to why, I don't know. I always liked to take care of hurt things, even as a kid. But it isn't that now, I'm not so keen on that end of it any more. I'm mad on the discovering part, the exploratory side, the finding out. I love the accuracy—the delicacy of touch you have to develop—the up-to-the-minute mind, the concentration. There's so much to learn and still so much after that. No end of it, so little is known, really. Do you think a woman could ever acquire it—the scientific mind, the—the detachment?"

He laughed, shook his head.

"Do I think? Ask your contemporaries, my dear, if you wish the affirmative answer! I'm all admiration for you youngsters and your ambitious gropings, your questionings and gallantry. But whether I think you'll come out anywhere, or find an answer, other than the answers of your mothers before you, whether I think you fight in a righteous cause, frankly, I don't know."

"Youngsters? You mean—girls?"

"Of course!"

"Then you believe that—"

He lifted his hand, stopped her, "No, you don't. I've stood a good deal from your generation of late years, but I draw the line at that. I'll not be hurled into a discussion of sex—any sex. I'm as God made me, a product of the ancient eighties, the palpitant nineties, and I haven't progressed one yard!"

Later, when she said goodbye he asked her, "I gave you my address. It will always find me, although I'm a footloose person. You will write, won't you? You won't forget your promise?"

She answered, yes, to one question; no, to the other. She held his hand in hers, leaned from the taxi, "I wish you weren't going. I'll miss you."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Uncle Jack Hooley, manager of the Sheridan Square Theater, where the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club meets each Saturday, had as much fun as the members at last Saturday's meeting. Uncle Jack greeted all the youngsters as they entered the theater, many of them bringing the stockings which Santa Claus will fill and distribute to them on Christmas Eve.

STOCKINGS HUNG

The stockings of these youngsters have been hung in the lobby and each week something will be put into them so that when Santa returns them at the big Christmas party they will be filled to overflowing.

"Uncle Jack" started a new mystery serial all about wild animals and the 15 children who could name the 10 footprints on a sheet of paper were admitted to the meeting free. However, only six members knew all the footprints, two boys and four girls. They were Betty Baldinger, Sylvia Ball, Sam Clark, William Colzin, Francis Carney and Susan Capo. The footprints were those of the monkey, elephant, raccoon, giraffe, wolf, moose, bear, lynx, crocodile and lion.

For entertainment the pupils of the Fairgreaves School of Dancing offered five acts. Harriett McCloed sang "Your Telling Me" and finished with a fast tap dance. Vera Mahoney, to the tune of "Underneath the Harlem Moon," tap danced her way right into the hearts of the members. Jane Chantlier next offered an acrobatic specialty, which also received much applause. Ruth Wisner sang "Your So Beautiful," and for the finale Jim Heriot, Harriett McCloed and Vera Mahoney did a very fast and pleasing acrobatic dance.

DOLL FOR GIRLS

How many of the girl members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komis Club would like to own the nicest dolly in the city. Yes, there's enough for every girl member and the Sun-Telegraph this year is giving them away free to any girl who obtains three new subscriptions to the daily and Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

In another part of the Sun-Telegraph today you will find a big advertisement showing the pictures of "Precious Baby" and "Ducky Darling," together with the three subscription blanks. Get these three subscription blanks filled out and send them to the secretary Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and after they have been verified, the secretary will notify you to come in for your dolly. That's all you have to do. Easy, isn't it?

Sport Gangsters Terrorize the Woods

He ain't particular. The horns can be the rims of spectacles and the hair can be a toupee.

He will bag a grizzly, a stag or a hog. He is after wild game and is willing to annoy it until it gets wild.

That is what we would call homicidal modesty.

But spot the same traffic violator in the high timbers. Give him a double-barreled arsenal. Also a license to shoot birds, bees and animals. And he will go nuttier than Brazil in harvest time.

He will load up and bang away at quail, farmers, moose and barns. He will even shoot a mild old sheep and claim it didn't know the password.

The world will be better off when city sportsmen are kept out of the farmlands in November and farmers are kept out of the cities the rest of the year.

We would rather be a spy in a war between cross-eyed Zambeegians and near-sighted Walluchians than to take a stroll in the woods during November. Your life ain't worth the wrapper on a three-cent cigar.

You can dodge a man who is aiming at you. But there ain't no getting away from a city Daniel Boone who handles a gun like a garden hose. He sprays everything within a radius of 16 congressional districts.

So we ain't a bit astonished when we read about one of those astigmatic sportsmen knocking himself off for a chipmunk. He would have done the same thing if he had been after field mice.

Editor: Some people think that the Roosevelt who ran for President is the same one who was President once before. They're way off. The Roosevelt that was President before is now Governor of the Philippine Islands. He made a speech for Hoover. His name is Theodore Roosevelt, commonly called Teddy. The one elected President is Francis K. Roosevelt, who was Secretary of the Navy under McKinley and again under Wilson. Please get this correct, as a lot of fellows are all mixed up.

A Plan for Economy

The Pittsburgh Metropolitan District Project Should Make a Strong Appeal to the Citizens.

In view of the harassed taxpayers' demand for economy in municipal government, the Pittsburgh Metropolitan District plan, which is to come before the Legislature again in the approaching session, should command stronger support than ever before.

Under the plan the municipal units comprising Allegheny County, whether cities, boroughs or townships, would unite to form a greater City of Pittsburgh co-terminus with the county. While retaining their independence in local affairs, they would be governed as a single unit in the larger matters of public service. It would thus be possible to eliminate a good many jobs and jobholders and thereby to reduce the taxpayers' burden.

Another benefit, of course, would be to give Pittsburgh its proper rating as the fourth or fifth largest city of the United States, with the prestige and business advantages that go with such a rank.

The plan would have gone into effect several years ago but for the provision in the original charter that it must receive a two-thirds majority in a majority of the municipalities. At the election in June, 1929, the plan received an overwhelming majority in the county as a whole, and a majority in a majority of the municipalities, but fell slightly short of the two-thirds majority required.

The Legislature at its last regular session adopted a constitutional amendment eliminating the two-thirds provision and merely requiring a majority vote in the county and a majority vote in a majority of the municipalities to put the plan into effect. The measure must be passed by the Legislature a second time—that is, at the next regular session—before it can go before the people of the state for final ratification or rejection.

The outlook is bright for favorable action at Harrisburg, but the leaders in the movement should not take it for granted that no further efforts are necessary to put the plan through.

Revenue Requirements

A General Manufactures' Sales Tax Is the Best Plan for Balancing the Federal Budget.

Facing a deficit in the federal Treasury which may exceed $1,000,000,000 at the end of the fiscal year, Congress will be compelled at the coming session to raise more revenue to run the government.

If the administration presents to Congress a balanced budget and reports a net reduction of $500,000,000 in appropriations for the new fiscal year, a like amount will have to be raised by new taxes.

Congress can easily obtain this additional revenue if it will resort to a general manufactures' sales tax and apply it to practically all articles except food and clothing.

Even Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, now admits that such a sales tax will probably be necessary to balance the budget.

The budget would probably have been balanced at the last session if Mr. Byrns had kept faith with the leadership of his party in the House instead of deserting it at a critical moment.

Mr. Byrns joined the other Democratic leaders in the House in an agreement to support a sales tax at the last session, provided the House Committee on Ways and Means reported in its favor.

When the committee reported a carefully drawn revenue bill with a moderate sales tax as its main provision, Mr. Byrns changed his mind and joined the opposition to the sales tax. His desertion of the leadership of his party on that question was a powerful if not the decisive factor in the defeat of the sales tax.

The fact that Mr. Byrns apparently has seen the error of his ways is encouraging evidence that the Democratic membership of the House at the coming session will not repeat its revolt against its leadership by rejecting a sales tax as a budget balancing necessity.

If Congress will resort to a general manufactures' sales tax to make up the deficit, it will safeguard the credit of the government, avoid additional unjust and burdensome taxes, and clear the way for floating a prosperity loan to finance new public works on which hundreds of thousands of jobless Americans can be employed.

And the relief of unemployment is the most urgent task to be tackled at the next session of the Congress.

The leaders of both political parties ought to adjourn politics long enough to perform that task before they attempt any other.

For to wage a successful war upon starvation is going to require the energetic efforts of a united Congress, wisely led.

Insurance Rackets

There Is a Warning in the Complaints That Certain Societies Have Dodged Their Obligations.

A multitude of men and women who have lost their positions are selling insurance. Insurance is a good thing, but it does not pay to accept in full faith everything that the agents for obscure insurance and beneficial societies may tell "prospects."

James H. Howarth, of the State Insurance Department, declares a number of these societies, although not licensed to do business in Pennsylvania, are operating here, and that some of them are rackets. He mentioned cases in which they had failed to pay the stipulated benefits on the death of policyholders.

Two agents of such a society were fined in Pittsburgh last week, and there have been prosecutions in a number of other places in the state, notably Uniontown, where seven cases of failure to pay death benefits were found.

Call the Plumber In

Observe the wet and worried gent
Plugging a leaky pipe,
Although he toils with good intent
The net result is tripe,
And it is plainly evident
That he is not the type.

With streamlets squirting in his eye
And dripping from his chin,
The water bills are rising high,
The bankroll growing thin.
His efforts are a flop, so why
Not call the plumber in?

Love Him—But Let Him Live

A man wants to be admired beyond all things. He enjoys being in love. He likes to be loved.

* * *

* * *

* * *

That's where the Oriental woman has it all over her emancipated western sisters. In fact, it is only in the Orient, where woman does the love-making and man lolls calmly back and accepts (or rejects) her frank devotion, that woman is really understood.

An Oriental wife can shower her husband with tenderness, coddling and a million little attentions, without feeling that he will get tired or bored. That is what he expects and he never gets enough of it.

* * *

But the American man, who has always done all the active wooing, expects to keep right on doing his own courting—or what remains of it—after marriage. And it's a wise woman, who refrains from infringing on what he regards as his "rights," by smothering him with affection.

* * *

"Some like 'em cold," says Ring Lardner. But that's only the half of it. Not "some," but most men like their women sweet but slightly frosted.

* * *

The woman who sang "Less than the dust beneath thy chariot wheels," may have given her dusky Asiatic lover a big thrill; but no modern Nordic could forgive a girl for holding herself "dirt cheap." He can stand occasional outbursts of affection, provided they are brief and passing, like his northern summers; but he would simply suffocate and choke under the continuous warmth of an Indian sun or a continuous scorching emotion.

* * *

He resents being followed around with a hot-water bottle and a questionnaire in the name of "wifely love." He doesn't want a woman hanging around and fussing over him, continually. All he asks is that she pick up his pajamas, have his coffee hot, and then read her own mail while he concentrates on his newspaper.

* * *

Once in a while, he may like to be petted, but seven days a week is too much for him. Five days out of seven, a woman's love-pats merely irritate him.

* * *

In short, a man wants to live first—and love after; and to be loved last of all. But a woman wants to love first, last and all the time!

Love him—but let him live!

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

We're facing a new world.

Every so often this happens to the human race. An ice cap comes down, or men discover fire, or they come out of caves and begin to live in tents. Every so often some tremendous change occurs on earth, and people are forced to adapt themselves to that change.

But adapting is a hard job. It is hard for people to live in new ways; harder still for them to think in new ways. And so, for every one person who went forward into the new life, 10,000 held back and perished miserably.

This was true of both men and brutes. Our fossil beds are filled with the remains of animals that couldn't change their habits quickly enough to survive in a new world; and our history is filled with the records of men who were blotted out because they couldn't or wouldn't step lively when the Big Parade quickened up.

And now another tremendous change has come over the world. We have come into the Machine Age. And no other change has ever demanded such tremendous alterations in the human program.

Life has altered more in the last 80 years than it altered in the preceding 800.

THERE IS A GREATER GAP BETWEEN THE WAY IN WHICH YOU LIVE AND THE WAY IN WHICH YOUR GRANDFATHER LIVED, THAN THERE WAS BETWEEN CAESAR'S LIFE AND GEORGE WASHINGTON'S.

It was hard for people who had eaten raw food and slept like animals in straw-lined holes, to learn to use fire. It was hard for those people, later on, to come out of their caves and live in tents, and become wandering tribes. But these changes were slight in comparison with the changes which we must make to adapt ourselves to the Machine Age.

Now we must change not only our way of sleeping and eating, but we must change EVERYTHING in our lives. We must change our speed, our times, our ways of feeling, all our ideas about home, and governments and shops, and factories—our ideas about right and wrong.

The thing that was fair in a nation of 1,000,000 people, isn't fair in a nation of 121,000,000 people.

The thing that seemed efficient in a 12-hour day, six-day working week, isn't efficient in a six-hour, five-day working week.

You've always thought that your dad and your mother were mighty fine people, haven't you? If you could live as they lived—make a record equal to theirs—you'd be satisfied.

But that won't do! It isn't enough for you to make a record equal to your mother's and dad's; to think the thoughts they thought, and do the jobs they did. You must SURPASS their record.

You must think DIFFERENT thoughts, and MORE thoughts; and you must think them QUICKER and change them OFTENER.

You must live in a different kind of house; in a different amount of space; eat different food; wear an entirely new scheme of clothing; find different amusements; have a different range of interests; develop a different rate of speed; learn how to get along with different people; adapt different standards and ideals.

All of your life, down to the smallest details, must be changed from the program of your fathers, if you are to hold your place in this new world.

We speak of the hardships which the Old Folks endured. But in one great essential, life was very soft and simple for them. In your grandfather's time, one great alteration during a man's lifetime was sufficient—the alteration between youth and manhood.

But now a man must alter his methods and ideas every year, every month, almost every day!

AND THAT'S A TOUGH JOB!

It's a job that wrenches a man's body and strains his mind almost to the breaking point. Indeed, millions of modern minds are being strained beyond the breaking point. Life has become so fast, so complicated, that thousands are cracking up under the tensions; and others are seeking escape in other ways—crawling off into day dreams, taking to drink, going gypsy.

You, too, can escape. You can stand still and let your own silliness or cussedness mount around you, until it smothers you, as the primeval brutes were smothered in the mud they would not leave—

Or you can take your place in the new world, and make your mark in it. It will be hard. You will have to battle constantly. But it will be worth all it costs!

Which is it going to be?

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Isn't It So?

Marriage works when two can live as cheaply as one.

Things people give you may cost you more than they are worth.

Sometimes the reason a woman is running around is that she has a wide circle of friends.

The fool who used to rock the boat now rocks the auto going around a corner on two wheels.

New Deal Victory Raises Hopes for An Economic Council

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

IN this period of baffling economic riddles, the American electorate turned to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt because he showed himself more hospitable to progressive ideas than his opponent.

Now that the "new deal" has been victorious at the polls, it is timely to formulate plans for new social machinery for adapting the American people to changing economic problems.

In the last analysis, the depression represented a breakdown of public and private management in the large.

Scientific progress and change in economic technique outstripped governmental and industrial policies, which became outmoded.

Thousands of unco-ordinated business entities, proceeding independently, created a state of anarchy in the business world, the consequences of which entail wholesale unemployment and widespread human suffering.

It would be helpful to all to develop a synthesizing central mind in business, which could correlate and interpret the major economic facts for the benefit of all.

THE pattern for such a steering committee could be found in the War Industries Board or in the Council of National Defense.

When a group of distinguished citizens of both parties suggested such a mechanism last June, President Hoover rejected the proposal. The President raised a technical legal objection, and also added his opinion that such a body was not necessary, as adequate governmental agencies were already at work.

But, irrespective of the President's opinion, existing agencies have not proved equal to the major problem of organizing business and government to deal constructively with the continuing causes of the depression.

A central economic planning body, with full access to significant data, could render immense service in pointing out dangerous trends when they are in the making, rather than waiting blindly until after they have wrought their wreckage.

AMERICAN voters on election day emphatically protested against the present administration's tendency to lock stables after the horses have been stolen.

A non-partisan economic council, guided by experts, cannot in a free country be a substitute for individual thinking and individual initiative, but under its informed guidance independent business managers will be in position to exercise the prerogatives of their liberty more wisely and more usefully.

In order to convert the new technological efficiency of industry into a blessing for the masses instead of a curse, the country must have the courage to devise new civilizing instrumentalities for managing the vast forces that have been unloosened by present day machinery.

IF invention is to prove other than a Frankenstein, enlightened planning must be substituted for drifting, and social control must be exercised.

As Dean W. B. Donham, of Harvard, has indicated, foresight is the test of our ability to overcome chaos with human intelligence.

With all the superfluity of boards, commissions and agencies in Washington, why cannot we have the benefit of a co-ordinating economic council, which will by its leadership give expression to the popular impulses to convert potential mechanical productivity into human welfare?

It is to be hoped that the new President will speedily recommend some such machinery as a peace time war industries board to carry out his own aspirations for greater stability in economic affairs.

MUNICIPAL DONKEY

By Winifred Black

I never did in my life, till the other day, when I visited a quaint village on the seashore, and the mayor of the village told me about it.

The mayor of the village is a blacksmith by trade, and a lawyer by profession. He always has something interesting to tell, either about courts and rulings, or about aldermen and their odd little ways.

It was the blacksmith mayor who told me about the municipal donkey.

"In the woods, just above here," he said, "there are quite a few pleasant little houses. They are all owned and inhabited by women—either widows or divorcees or maiden ladies.

"Each of the women has a small income of her own and has come here to live quietly in the woods by the sea, where she can have a fire of pine cones in the evening and walk down the path and see the sunset over the ocean. And at night when the wind rises, the pine trees tell her strange tales of the old days when the Spaniards made merry in this very forest, and when money was reckoned in ingots and not in checks.

"Well, the recent trouble in the financial market has cut the income of most of these good women a good deal more than once in half—and they have sold their little runabouts and their little roadsters, and now they walk to the village every day for mail and to do their marketing.

"There is a place in the village where you can get vegetables and rice, oatmeal, flour, bacon and tea quite reasonable if you will carry the things home yourself.

"For several months now I have watched these women loaded down with heavy packages, toil up the steep path.

"And now I know what to do about it. I'm going to start a municipal donkey line!

"I shall show the women how to load the donkey, so that the packages will not fall off and the city will buy the donkey and pay for his feed and for his shelter.

"And the good ladies will not have to trudge up the steep path winter and summer, heavily loaded with their marketing.

"Why not? We furnish school buses free of charge to carry children back and forth from school, sometimes I think this is not a particularly good idea.

"I walked six miles a day to and from school myself in my day, and so did thousands of other good American boys and girls.

"Maybe it would do these moderns good to walk back and forth from school—but this municipal donkey line to ease the burden of the days for these lone women—why isn't that a perfectly practical and a perfectly good idea?"

And I really meant it—why not?
